Notice to Europe. Father 79, Baby 8 Pounds. Two in the Electric Chair. Yes, We Are Docile.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LIKE GANG members, collecting on a corner to decide on the next profitable enterprise, a number of Europe's nations are said to have organized NOT to pay money borrowed from Uncle Sam.

They will not relish President Hoover's letter to Senator Borah which says:

"I DO NOT PROPOSE THAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE SHALL BE PRESSED INTO ANY LINE OF ACTION OR THAT OUR POLICIES SHOULD BE IN ANY WAY INFLUENCED BY SUCH A COMBINATION, EITHER OPEN OR IMPLIED."

This serves notice on Europe that this country expects them to pay.

It is probable that they will NOT pay, and the United States would not go to war to force payment.

But the President has given notice that they can't combine to "save their faces" and force us to pretend that we like the proposed "welching."

FOLLOWING THAT interesting statement from President Hoover, comes the announcement that he has cut his own salary $15,000, reducing it from $75,000 a year to $60,000, which is the maximum cut of 20 per cent allowed under the law. The salaries of cabinet members he reduced 15 per cent, from $15,000 a year to $12,750, undersecretaries 10 per cent.

It is amusing in the government of a republic by big business to find the richest country in the world compelled to cut salaries. France pays her president four times what we pay ours and doesn't ask him to cut his salary.

THIS WOULD have interested Plato, of ancient Greece, who thought men should have children, when old, and women when fully developed, about thirty.

Prof. Richard T. Ely, 79, distinguished professor of economics, married one of his students a year ago, and the young lady, Mrs. Margaret Hahn Ely, in her early thirties, gave birth to a fine eight-pound boy a few days ago.

THAT BABY ought to do something. His mother is a doctor of philosophy and his father one of the most learned men in the country. But it may turn out otherwise, and he may be just a good strong average American citizen.

The mother says:

"He may become a football player or a prize fighter."

She is amazed at the power of his muscles. Most mothers are thus amazed. You would be amazed too, if you had carried a kicking baby around, for a few months.

PLATO, WHO thought fathers should be old, and mothers at an age combining maximum mental and physical strength, would be interested in the heredity of this Ely baby. Plato's own father, Ariston, traced his descent to the god Poseidon, or Neptune as we call him. His mother, Perictione, was related to Solon, one of the seven wise men of Greece.

NIGHT BEFORE last, in Sing Sing prison, two young murderers went to heaven or the other way via the electric chair. A third, "scheduled" for death at the same time, obtained a 24-hour stay, promising mysterious information.

Of the two executed, one was twenty, the other twenty-one years old. They killed a policeman, and both walked to the "chair" smoking cigarets.

ONE OF THE two men, Alfred Cozzi, died 56 minutes before midnight; the other, Alfred Coorbellini, died four minutes later and may have overtaken his friend on the journey to their destination.

Joseph Bauman, 21 years old, was allowed 24 hours more life, because he offered to deliver a murderer unknown to the police. The theory that criminals do not "squeal" is a mistake. They squeal rapidly when the electric chair faces them.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE was right when he called Americans "very docile." Here, when we don't like a city, state or national government, we simply "lump it," and do nothing.

In Weimar, Germany, made familiar to everybody by Goethe's residence there, they are less patient. Yesterday the unemployed first wrecked the municipal employment office, then called on the mayor and beat him severely. It is regrettable, and shows how highly strung those Europeans are.

THE FEELING between North and South Ireland shows no improvement. Irish in the south invite the north to join in making all Ireland an independent nation, refusing to take any oath to King George, or pay England for Irish lands.

Liverpool Orangemen reply by attacking the great Catholic Cathedral there, more than three hundred of them throwing bricks through beautiful stained glass windows, and singing hymns during the attack. Police are now guarding the Cathedral.

SOME THOUSANDS of veterans are still in Washington although there is not the faintest hope of getting any bonus this year. They sing a song entitled "My Bonus Lies Over the Ocean."

It lies farther away than that, unfortunately. The wise thing for the veterans would be to go home, and talk to their neighbors. It is clearly useless to talk to Congress.

VETS MASS AT CAPITOL AND DEFY OFFICIALS

Waters Hostage as Bluecoats Call Reinforcements

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP.)—Disorder threatening a clash developed in front of the Capitol shortly after Congress convened today when members of the bonus army broke from the far side of the Capitol toward the building.

A few minutes before, Walter W. Waters, a commander of the bonus army, had been arrested.

Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, informed the bonus-seekers that Waters would remain under arrest until the men returned to the far side of the plaza.

They did not return at once, but stood shouting, "We want Waters."

Others leaders of the veterans also were placed under arrest. They were escorted into the Capitol.

Meantime, Glassford ordered all policemen off duty to report to their stations.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP.)—Thousands of men from the bonus army concentrated in the Capitol Plaza today as Congress convened for what promised to be its last session until December.

The group from California which has marched unceasingly back and forth in front of the building for the last week was augmented by company after company from the B. E. F.

They marched on the Capitol in military formation, some of them head by drum and bugle corps.

As each new contingent arrived, long cheers went up from the marchers. The new arrivals promptly fell into the half a dozen lines which were marching and countermarching on the far side of the Capitol plaza.

TRAFFIC STOPPED

Police had stopped all motor traffic through the grounds, and pedestrians had to show they had business in the Capitol before they were admitted.

Except for a few additional motorcycle policemen, there was no evidence of a large increase in the guard.

The army was good natured and willing to cheer or laugh at anything taking place in front of the building. A vigorous demonstration came when a large truck

SEEK TO FREE 2 JAILED FOR TAX

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 16.—Habeas corpus hearings were scheduled today for Archie McEachern and Ivy Newman, the latter a Negro, of New Kensington, committed to jail for failure to pay school taxes of $5.25 each and costs. Yesterday the court released six North Huntingdon Township tax delinquents.

Last month F. J. Frederick, tax collector of New Kensington, asked the school board for exonerations of delinquents. The board refused. It is said Frederick has about 500 delinquents on his books. The two arrested, jobless, were committed to jail.

Fans Greeting Stars Hurt in Hollywood Jam

NORMA SHEARER

'Strange Interlude' Premiere Draws Riotous Throng

HOLLYWOOD, July 16.—(INS.)—Six persons were injured as several thousand movie fans rioted in front of Grauman's Chinese theater to pay tribute to Norma Shearer and other film stars at the world premiere of the picture "Strange Interlude."

Because of the crowd, Miss Shearer did not arrive at the theater until early today when she, Clark Gable, Ralph Morgan and other stars were introduced from the stage.

Police aided film celebrities and others battle their way through the crowds into the theater. The injured were sent home after treatment at police hospitals.

Inability of persons with tickets to get inside the theater delayed the start of the program until after 10 P. M.

At 1 a. m., with the picture still being shown, Hollywood boulevard still was filled with a yelling throng waiting for the stars to leave the theater.

The audience greeted "Strange Interlude" from the Eugene O'Neill play as an achievement in screen history.

Steamer Saves Crew Of Burned Sailboat

CAPE MAY, N. J., July 16.—(INS.)—A radio message that the crew of the Darling, 25-foot sailing boat, burned at sea, had been picked up by the steamer President Monroe was received today.

The Monroe was bound for Panama.

Fire destroyed the small vessel near Absecon Light.

First reports of the burning boat indicated it had been an abandoned craft.

Tunney to Go on Stump For Roosevelt, Garner

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 16.—(INS.)—A place was being prepared in Democratic campaign arrangements today for Gene Tunney--orator.

After a round of golf yesterday—he shot 95—the retired heavyweight champion went into a huddle with Democratic National Committeeman Archibald McNeil, Jr., and the latter reported Gene had offered his services to the Democrats for their election drive.

McNeil said Tunney, mentioned vaguely now and then as a possible candidate for office, is not a candidate, but that he probably will prove to be a valuable platformer for the Roosevelt-Garner national ticket and for Gov. Cross and other Democrats in this state.

The confab with McNeil was viewed as marking Tunney's formal entrance into the political arena.

REYNOLDS MYSTERY GROWS

Pajama Clue Deepens Riddle in Shooting Of Tobacco Heir

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 16. — The pajama ensemble of one of the guests or of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, bride of the late Smith Reynolds, youthful tobacco millions heir, was found on the divan in the Reynolds home shortly after the body of young Reynolds was discovered fatally wounded. International News Service learned today.

Mrs. Reynolds, former Broadway "torch" singer, had worn pajamas during the evening of the party which preceded the tragedy. They consisted of a pair of duck trousers and a striped shirt.

Stuart Warnken, superintendent of the estate, testified before private hearing of the inquest into the death of Reynolds that he found two pieces of clothing on the divan.

He said that one piece looked like pajama trousers and the other one was probably a coat.

ATTIRE FOUND

The sweater and slippers of Mrs. Reynolds were subsequently found in the room occupied by Ab Walker, friend of Roynolds, held as a material witness during the investigation into the death of his chum.

Mrs. Reynolds had worn pa-

FEAR RIOT OVER DRYS' TACTICS

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., July 16.—(AP.)—Fearing "possible death and bloodshed" within the next few hours, Alexandria Bay waited today for an investigation into a situation which has caused injury to two federal prohibition agents and three residents of this village in the last few days.

Andrew McCampbell, federal prohibition administrator for New York State, was reported proceeding to Alexandria Bay under direct orders from Washington to discover the cause of ill-feeling over enforcement methods here.

Last Tuesday a mob surrounded a raided establishment, beat two prohibition agents and slit their automobile tires.

Thursday night a man and a woman were struck and injured by an automobile as agents drove away from a raid, and Agent Burke Bornemann, of Syracuse, was arrested. A stone flung at the agents struck and injured a boy.

G. J. Savage, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday wired protests to Treasury Secretary Ogden L. Mills, Commissioner Amos W. Woodcock, Senators Royal S. Copeland and Robert F. Wagner and Representatives Bertrand H. Snell and Francis D. Culkin.

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 16.—An hour before the Onusko-Seamon wedding ceremony in St. Mary's Greek Catholic Church at Tramger, a porch fronting the house in which parents of both bride and bridegroom lived collapsed, hurling 25 guests to the street.

Two persons were slightly injured, but the ceremony proceeded without delay.

LIGHTNING-STRUCK BARN BLAZING ON THE OLD SMITH FARM . . . , IT LIT UP THE NIGHT

MT. LEBANON BOY KILLED BY BOLT

Sewickley Guild Hall, Barn, Homes Fired By Lightning

Sweeping over the Pittsburgh district with unusual intensity, an electrical and rainstorm today had claimed one life, caused heavy damage to property and brought welcome relief from the heat wave, which late yesterday caused another death—the fifth in Pennsylvania in three days.

Although reports of damage came from practically all parts of Allegheny and many adjoining counties, the heaviest losses were suffered in the South Hills region and in Sewickley. In the latter place lightning fired Guild Hall of St. James Catholic Church, Broad street, causing its destruction, with loss estimated at $50,000.

GUILD HALL BURNS

Guild Hall, the largest auditorium in the Sewickley district, lay a mass of ruins today. Erected 10 years ago, it was used for practically every civic and charitable function of the borough. The Rev. Father William P. Curtin, pastor of the church, said that although the walls were still standing, it would be necessary to raze the entire structure to rebuild.

Paul Ludebuehl, 9, of 615 Rockwood street, Mt. Lebanon, was fatally injured when lightning struck the attic of his home. He died early today in Mercy Hospital. George Davis, 17, a cousin of the dead boy, was dazed by the lightning, which caused $25 damage to the structure.

While Mt. Lebanon firemen responded to the alarm of fire at the Ludebuehl home, two other alarms were sounded.

MT. LEBANON BLAZE

A barn on the property of G. W. Smith, Alfred avenue, Mt. Lebanon, was destroyed by fire, with loss estimated at $4,000. A horse and cow in the structure were led to safety, but a fresh-cut crop of

3 Demoted Inspectors Ask for Pensions; Won't Walk Beats

The reverberations of Mayor Charles H. Kline's shakeup in the police department were rumbling down through the ranks of lieutenants, sergeants and patrolmen today as it became known that the three inspectors demoted yesterday had applied for retirement pensions.

Another list of transfers was in the making in the office of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, it was said. Nearly 50 men would be affected.

Walsh's chief clerk, William Miller, was expected to hand down official notification this afternoon to those affected.

ASK FOR PENSIONS

The ousted inspectors, Charles Faulkner, of the North Side; Joseph Elsner, of the West End, and James N. Hoey, of Oakland, have announced they would retire rather than walk beats. They have applied for monthly pensions, amounting in each case to $106.

Faulkner said he would spend the summer with his family at Conneaut Lake. Elsner declared he had no immediate plans. It was rumored Hoey had been offered a position as captain of the Pennsylvania Railroad police.

The long heralded shakeup was an attempt by the Mayor to regain his shattered political power.

Three police captains, Harry J. Mellon, John W. Barry and Anthony Block, were named to succeed the three demoted inspectors.

CAPTAINS NAMED

Mellon takes Inspector Albert Beebe's place at Central and Center Avenue stations. The latter was transferred to the West End in Elsner's place. Block will take Faulkner's post and Barry will command the Oakland district.

Lieut. Thomas Gross, Lieut. Thomas Lyons and Patrolman John M. Flavin were appointed captains. Patrolmen Ward Sanders and John Showalter were advanced to lieutenants.

Plane Carries Indians' White Wives From Isle

PANAMA CITY, July 16.—(AP.)—Two American women, mother and daughter, who married members of the diminutive San Blas Indian tribe which inhabits the north coast of Panama and surrounding islands, are waiting here for transportation to New York, their matrimonial careers ended.

The women were Gladys Brown, who married White Eagle in Akron, O., in 1930, and her mother Cora, who married Charles Williams in New York. Mrs. Williams is 65.

The two couples lived in the San Blas territory until recently. The women left when they discovered their husbands preferred the native girls.

The only means of transportation between the mainland and the islands inhabited by the San Blas is by airplane or canoe. The Red Cross headquarters at Colon was appealed to and a navy plane brought the women to Colon to sail for home.

The younger of the two expects to give birth to a child soon. Officials here said if the child was born on the way there would be complications connected with its entry into the United States under the immigration laws.

DRY STRATEGISTS SPLIT OVER HOOVER ATTITUDE

PROHIBITIONIST LEADER QUITS IN QUARREL

Record of President Sifted for Views On Rum Issue

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP.)—The National Prohibition Board of Strategy wants drys to support candidates who believe "prohibition ought to be the law" but has not gotten unanimous support from its ranks for a resume intended to show President Hoover's attitude.

The recommendation, also urging opposition to modification or repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act, is contained in a summary of campaign policy drawn up by a subcommittee and approved by the board yesterday.

The resume of the records of Mr. Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt was attached based on quoted statements. It was a belief that the Hoover summation made the President dryer than he is, said D. Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the Prohibition party, that made him resign from the board late yesterday.

Colvin is working for a third party, but Senator Borah, Independent Republican, definitely announced that he would not be a presidential candidate on a prohibition ticket.

The board's resume quoted, among other things, President Hoover's acceptance speech of 1928 in which he said "I do not favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment;" his message in 1931 accompanying the Wickersham report when he told Congress it was his "duty" to "enforce the law." The review then added:

"During the presidency of Mr. Hoover, federal enforcement of the prohibition laws has steadily advanced and has attained a higher degree of efficiency than in any other period since adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment."

It emphasized Roosevelt's acceptance speech in Chicago when he said:

"This convention wants repeal. Your candidate wants repeal. I say to you now from this date the Eighteenth Amendment is doomed."

It recalled this statement by Speaker Garner just before the Democratic convention which nominated him for the vice presidency:

"When the prohibition amendment was proposed, I, as a member of Congress, voted against it. I have never believed it sound or workable and it should be repealed."

MRS. SABIN SEES G. O. P. 'FRAUD'

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP.)—The Republican prohibition plank was denounced as a "fraud and deception" last night by Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, the nation's most active woman anti-prohibitionist.

The former Republican national committeewoman told a Democratic rally on Long Island:

"Even the magic wand of the distinguished Secretary of the Treasury cannot transform it into a repeal plank."

As head of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, Mrs. Sabin took the stump to analyze the prohibition stands of the two major parties in their 1932 platforms.

Her address was the first she had made since her executive committee passed a resolution urging women anti-prohibitionists to support Franklin D. Roosevelt because of the Democratic repeal stand.

hay was destroyed. Harold Hasley, 22, 668 Bower Hill road, Mt. Lebanon fireman, was injured when he stepped on a rusty nail.

The home of W. H. Tilton, 77 Roycroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon, was slightly damaged by lightning and fire.

Many of the members of the Mt. Lebanon fire department were in Canonsburg attending a demonstration at the time of the fire. They hurried back to Mt. Lebanon.

Just as the demonstration closed, the Canonsburg department was called to fight fires in Cecil and Upper St. Clair townships. Lightning destroyed the home of Paul Chiffone at Cecil. A number of barns in the region were burned.

Slight damage was caused to the home of George Price, 554 Highland avenue, Bellevue, when lightning struck the porch.

OIL TANK STRUCK

An oil storage tank on the W. H. Davis farm, between Washington and Eighty-four, was destroyed by fire when lightning struck a nearby derrick. Dense clouds of smoke covered the countryside, attracting thousands of motorists. Two companies of Washington firemen were called to the scene.

A number of telephone and telegraph poles were felled by the lightning in Washington County, causing the re-routing of calls around the storm area.

Soaring temperatures, which caused the death yesterday of Jeremiah Greak, 70, of 210 Talbot avenue, Braddock, as he delivered butter and eggs in Braddock, dropped rapidly following the storm. Further showers were predicted by the Washington Weather Bureau for this district today, with warmer weather tomorrow.

W.C.T.U. for Hoover, Mrs. Boole Indicates

NEW YORK, July 16.—(INS.)—President Hoover will be supported for re-election by the Women's Christian Temperance Union unless his acceptance speech reveals he has changed his announced dry views, Mrs. Ella Boole, national president of the organization, said today.

A national convention of the W. C. T. U. at Seattle, in August, will decide the matter of Hoover's support.

12 Dead in Mexican Storm, 12 Missing

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—(AP.)—The death toll of the cloudburst that swept Saltillo, Mexico, late Thursday had reached 12 today, and another dozen were still missing. Fifty homes were carried away.

HEAT LIFE TOLL NEARS 50

Associated Press.

Summer stoked on today, preparing a hot week-end for a nation which sweltered yesterday in many sections, under highest temperatures of the year and counted its three-day heat wave victims at nearly 50.

Brief respites were granted favored sections last night. Breezes and thundershowers cooled Chicago. But the terrific heat reached a high of 105 degrees at Longview, Tex., and scorched other sections with temperatures of or near 100 was abated only temporarily, the weather man indicated.

Nine deaths were attributed to the heat in Chicago, bringing the total for the three-day period to 15. Included was a victim of lightning when the storm broke up a neighborhood baseball game.

St. Louis's death list in two days of record warm with a 101 maximum yesterday mounted to seven.

Four heat deaths in Wisconsin, one in Kansas, four in Minnesota, two in Indiana, one in North Dakota, together with nine drownings of relief seekers in Minnesota, Indiana and Iowa completed the fatality list.

CONGRESS NEAR ADJOURNMENT

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(INS.)—In an atmosphere surcharged with excitement over the impending national political campaign, congressional leaders hoped to adjourn Congress by tonight. The session started seven and a half months ago.

Two major pieces of legislation, as well as many miscellaneous matters, remained to be disposed of as both houses were called into session early today to clear the decks.

The $2,122,000,000 jobless relief bill was before the Senate for approval of the conference report. The House has already adopted the report and President Hoover's signature was assured.

The home loan bank bill, with its currency expansion riders, was still to be acted upon finally. The House situation was cleared by the unexpectedly strong defeat of the Glass and Goldsborough expansion proposals.

Bonus Veterans Plan To Picket White House

WASHINGTON, July 16.—As the mass of bonus seekers marched to the Capitol today, plans went forward to transfer the veterans' "march of death" to the White House.

Roy W. Robertson, broken-necked leader of the California contingent which has tramped the Capitol plaza for four days and three nights, announced the proposal to picket the presidential residence.

Meanwhile, Washington officialdom continued to "pass the buck" over the comic call for Marines to guard the Capitol from 200 dog-tired veteran "death marchers."

At the White House, it was said President Hoover, commander-in-chief of the Army and the Navy, had not been consulted about placing the Capitol grounds under martial law.

Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, insisted the two companies of battle-equipped Marines, which marched up Capitol Hill and down again, were sent at the request of Vice President Curtis.

Bristling with wrath, the Vice President shouted:

"It's an infamous lie. I did not order out the Marines."

COUNSEL SAYS SUCCOP URGED TRIAL HERE

Kline's Attorney Sure Plea for Mayor Will Gain Freedom

By WILLIAM PFARR
Staff Correspondent.

BUTLER, Pa., July 16.—Bert Succop is not only honest—but broke.

Succop did not want to be tried in Butler County; he preferred to fight it out in Pittsburgh.

And Mayor Kline's chief counsel, Charles B. Prichard, is more confident than ever that his client will soon be free.

The author of the first two paragraphs is Col. E. L. Kearns, counsel for B. L. Succop, Pittsburgh's discharged supplies director.

The setting for these statements was the Butler County Court, where lawyers for Kline and Succop pleaded first to have the guilty verdict thrown out and, second, for a new trial. Both were convicted two months ago of misdemeanor.

In his argument to Judge Thomas D. Finletter, Col. Kearns revealed Succop's financial status, then declared his client was "coerced" into asking for a change of venue.

Prichard, tired from a long day of argument, flicked ashes from his cigaret, picked up a heavy brief case, and emphasized one short sentence:

"I'm more confident than ever."

Prichard was satisfied because a half dozen times during the day Judge Finletter seemed to agree that the jury's verdict against Klire was inconsistent—in that he was acquitted on the fourth count of buying three trucks from Henry Braun but was convicted on the fifth count, of paying in advance for the trucks.

Judge Finletter will give no decision before September. He is going to Maine with Mrs. Finletter for a vacation.

We'd Have a New Greeting Now For Lafayette

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Boys, we've been all wrong about Europe.

We apologize. That continent is still the bunk.

England and La Billious France deny they have been in cahoots against us.

They never intended to give us the run-around. Nope. Just the once-over-lightly against the grain.

When Premier Herriot was asked if he was going to give us a circus count on the war debt he said:

"What debt?"

That shows the man is absolutely innocent. He doesn't even remember it.

And just to show our appreciation we will get another four million men together, sail over to La Bilk France and yell:

"Lafayette, the suckers are back again."

The reductions will be on a sliding scale, ranging from 5 per cent on weekly salaries of $50 to 35 per cent on those of $1,500 or more a week. Mr. Schenck said the cuts are "to hold effect until such times as an economic recovery is manifest."

COUNTY TO FIX VOTE MACHINES

The County Commissioners have decided to make changes necessary to put voting machines bought by the county in shape for use, and try to collect for the job from the bonding companies.

Solicitor J. P. Fife yesterday told the Commissioners that officials of the Maryland Casualty Company had informed him they saw no breach of performance under their bond, and therefore no liability on their part.

The county may spend an additional $50,000 on the machines and then sue on the bond. Fife was authorized to proceed with legal steps.

Still to be corrected are the mechanism of the curtains, and one or two features by which the machines could be tampered with, according to Fife.

CANOE UPSETS, YOUTH DROWNS

A youth was drowned, another rescued clinging to an overturned canoe and a third swam to safety after an attempt to rescue his companion failed when a canoe capsized in the Youghiogheny River, near McKeesport, last night.

The drowned youth was Peter Makowka, 22, of 1206 Bank street, McKeesport. Police said he and his two companions, Stanley Bazlak, 21, and a brother, Mike, 19, of 2808 Stewart street, McKeesport, members of St. Mary's Catholic Church choir, went for a canoe ride after attending choir practice at the church.

Unable to swim, Mike clung to the overturned canoe until rescued by his brother. Fully clothed, Stanley dived for several minutes in a futile effort to rescue Makowka. The drowned youth was one of 14 children.

TORTURE PROBE HEAD SCORNS THREATS

Jury Foreman Pushes Inquiry in Convict Camp Brutality

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 16.—Although a series of sinister warnings failed to mature into action, police today sought the authors of kidnaping and death threats against Al F. Gorman, foreman of the Duval County grand jury which indicted two state prison guards for the alleged "torture murder" of Arthur Maillefert, 22-year-old New Jersey youth.

Gorman received the threats by mail and telephone during the past 48 hours. The final threat, delivered by telephone, intimated his only son would be kidnaped unless he ceased his activities as foreman of the grand jury, now investigating the administration of nearby state prison camps.

AUTOS CIRCLE HOME

Gorman reported today that a number of mysterious automobiles circled his home late last night, but no attempt was made to carry out the threats.

Gorman said that one of the threatening letters, warning him his life would be forfeited if he failed to obey its directions, called on him to halt his inquiry into prison camp conditions.

He said another letter demanded he "lay off Denmark." This referred to C. L. Denmark, one of the prison guards, who disappeared the night Maillefert died a "torture death" at the nearby Sunbeam prison camp.

Denmark has been sought ever since for questioning by the grand jury. He was reported to know all about the treatment accorded young Maillefert prior to his death. The grand jury already has indicted Guard Capt. George W. Courson and Guard Soloman M. Higginbotham on charges of first degree murder in connection with the boy's death.

Gorman reported a third threat by telephone, in which an unidentified person threatened to kidnap his only son.

SCORNFUL OF THREATS

Gorman said:

"I am not worried by these threats. I intend to conduct an unbiased investigation of the administration of prison camps in this county, regardless of the outcome. Threats will not stop me."

From his cot in the state prison hospital, with legs and hips encased in plaster and his body wracked by pain, James Dennison, 21, gave Gorman a gruesome account of inhuman brutality in a South Florida prison camp. Gorman visited the hospital to question several convicts who were witnesses to the torture death of Maillefert.

Dennison, whose home is in Philadelphia, related brutalities that last December cost the life of another prisoner, B. B. Reynolds, and may yet necessitate amputation of Dennison's left leg.

Superstition Behind Revolt—Kaufman

NEW YORK, July 16.—(INS.)—An ancient superstition was blamed by David E. Kaufman, American minister to Siam, here today for a vacation, as the inspiration for the recent Siamese revolt against the King.

The masses in Siam were taught to believe in the legend that the Chykra dynasty would last just a century and a half, Kaufman declared. The uprising occurred during the anniversary of the one hundred and fiftieth year.

Zoo Keeper Trampled By Blue Gnu Dies

DETROIT, July 16.—(AP.)—Gus Mott, 58, a keeper at the Detroit Zoological Park, gored and trampled by a blue gnu yesterday, died this morning in St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac.

Mott was taken to the hospital after a spectator, John Downey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., had distracted the animal by pelting it with rocks until other attendants could drag the injured man from the enclosure.

The gnu, a male, has been regarded as the most vicious animal in the park. It had killed one of its mates and two calves.

Mott was the only keeper who dared enter the animal's pen. The gnu was slashing him with its hoofs and goring him with its horns when Downey threw a rock at it.

While the gnu's attention was momentarily distracted, Downey seized a four-foot iron bar, vaulted the fence and beat off the enraged beast until other keepers arrived.

Washington Marker Out Of Place, Hart Asserts

The recent placing of a 15-ton George Washington stone marker in front of the A. M. Byers steel plant office at Ambridge was denounced yesterday by Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, historian of the George Washington Bi-centennial Commission and professor emeritus of Harvard University. He said:

"They have no right to put a marker there to boost a factory. It should have been placed a mile west on the site of Logstown."

His statement followed the start of the first official tour of Washington's line of travel in 1763 from Pittsburgh to Fort LeBoeuf. The tour is being conducted by the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania and the summer session of the University of Pittsburgh.

The spot where he declared the marker should have been placed was pointed out by the historian to the 70 teachers, Pitt summer school students and college professors.

The tourists first visited the Great House and other reminders of old Economy. After viewing the site of Logstown they went to Beaver to visit the site of Fort McIntosh, proceeding next to Evans City and Grove City, for a night stop. Today the party was to visit historical spots in Franklin, Meadville and Erie, where the tour ends.

DE VALERA HURLS WAR THREAT IN MACDONALD PARLEY

IRISH LEADER ENRAGED AT BRITISH

Prime Minister Dares Foe to Act as Talk On Tariff Fails

By LINTON WELLS
International News Service.

LONDON, July 16.—All hope of averting a tariff war between England and the Irish Free State was abandoned today as President De Valera left for Dublin to fight for his political life and Prime Minister MacDonald departed for Scotland for a vacation.

The hopelessness of the situation was admitted by William Norton, leader of the Irish Labor party whose efforts brought about last night's vain conference between De Valera and MacDonald—conference that failed because the Irish president stood firm in his refusal to pay the land annuities which were due on June 30. Norton said:

"What will be the next step? Well, I suppose the guns will begin to bark—that is to say retaliatory measures will be taken by both sides. The Irish Free State tariff bill will be put into effect as soon as possible.

TARIFF BILL PASSED

The Irish tariff bill was passed yesterday in Dublin by a vote of 68 to 57. Its victory in the Dail Eireann indicates that it will have a safe majority when taken up by the Senate on Monday. The English tariff bill is already in effect.

Large interest centered today in the declaration of De Valera's foes that failure to avert a trade crisis with England would mean loss of the Irish Labor party's support and his political death.

This was refuted by Norton, who has been a loyal supporter of De Valera in the present crisis.

De Valera and Norton left for Dublin without issuing any formal statement. The Irish President looked worn and tired. A small crowd cheered the Irish leader as the train departed, and De Valera smiled.

Prime Minister MacDonald boarded a train for Lossiemouth, Scotland, for two weeks' rest. He said:

"Our offer for immediate arbitration with the Irish Free State still holds good."

But it appeared that he, too, had abandoned hope.

MacDonald had ironically reserved a train compartment under the pseudonym of "Mr. Ireland."

CLASH AT CONFERENCE

After the heads of the two governments had departed it came to light that last night's conference between them was not so cordial as had been reported.

The conference started with both in a friendly attitude, but De Valera soon revealed an unyielding attitude and gave warning that unless Britain yielded it must bear the consequences. In effect he re-stated the threat of a "terrible war" which David Lloyd George made to him 11 years ago.

This aroused MacDonald's ire and he countered emphatically with the plain intimation that the Irish President could do his worst.

Thereupon the conference broke up and De Valera departed in such a rage that he refused even to shake hands with the British conferees.

Irish Farmers Hint Bolt From De Valera

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, July 16.—(AP.)—A report received from Londonderry today said Free State farmers in East Donegal proposed to ask the British government to allow them to export their cattle and produce free of duty to English markets provided they pay their land annuities direct to the British Treasury.

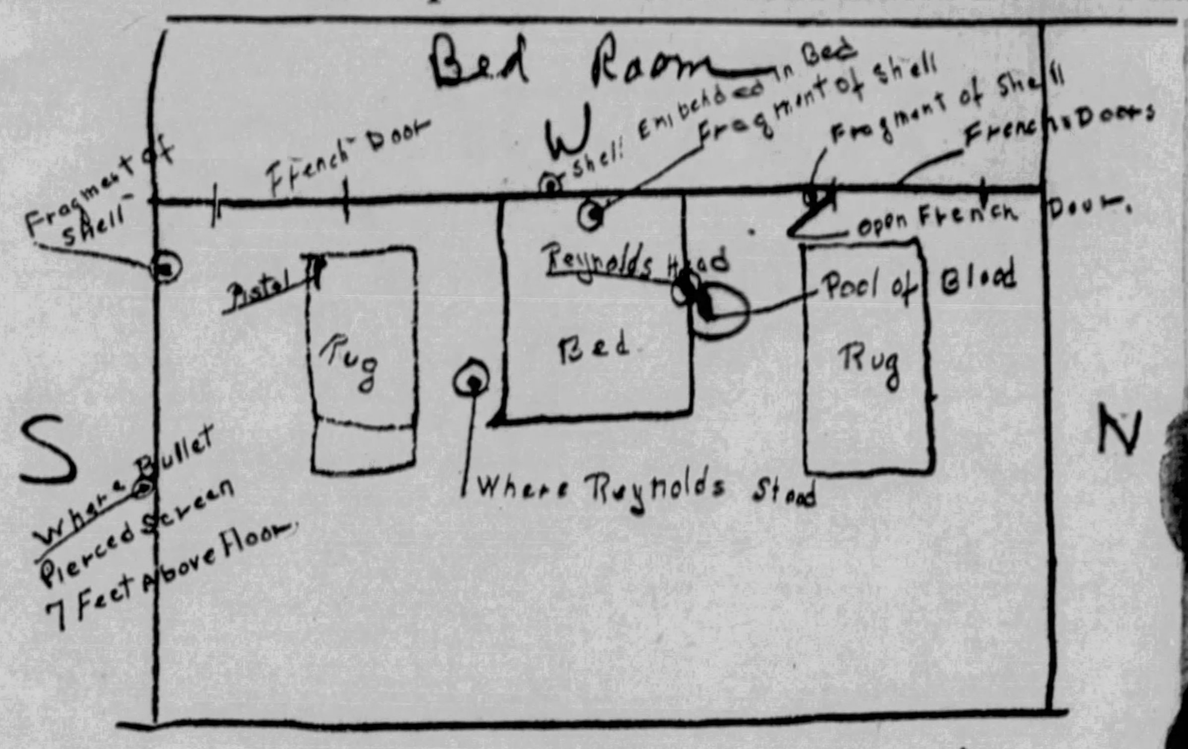
They were arrested on charges of attempted larceny.

Police-Sketched Map on Which Sheriff Bases Belief That Reynolds Was Shot Down



SHERIFF TRANSOU SCOTT'S PENCILED MAP OF ZACHARY SMITH REYNOLDS' DEATH SCENE

The map that Sheriff Scott of Forsyth County drew to support his contention that young Mr. Reynolds, tobacco heir, didn't shoot himself, was slain. He can't account for the angle at which a bullet pierced the screen (at left), for the blood across the bed from the spot where Miss Holman said her husband stood as he shot himself, for the various positions of several fragments of a shell. These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

PRIEST INJURED BY TRAIN DIES

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 16.—The Rev. Father Philip Bohan, 64, died in an ambulance early today while being taken to a hospital from a Pennsylvania Railroad train. First pastor and organizer of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church here, he was one of the best-known priests in the Altoona diocese.

Last Sunday Father Bohan went to Lincoln, Neb., to visit a sister and was returning home when struck by a train. Physicians' services were required at several points, but he insisted upon completing his journey home.

Born in County Leitrim, Ireland, he was educated there and ordained for the Pittsburgh diocese in 1896, coming to Johnstown that year as assistant rector of St. John's Church. Five years later he went to Tyrone as pastor of St. Matthew's, and in 1904 returned to Johnstown.

Pajama Clue Deepens Reynolds Case Riddle

jamas up until the time she returned to the house after being missing for at least three hours, according to witnesses.

She returned at 12:30 a. m. the night of the party, according to W. E. Fulcher, night watchman on the estate.

Walker testified that Mrs. Reynolds returned about 11:30 p. m.

Sheriff Transou Scott was attempting to identify the owner of the pajamas.

Mrs. Reynolds came into the house after being absent since 9:30 p. m., and at the time wore pajamas.

If Mrs. Reynolds discarded her costume downstairs she must have done it within a half hour of the time when the pistol shot rang out which killed her young husband, the secret testimony showed.

Meanwhile Sheriff Scott was analyzing the possible jealousy of Smith Reynolds as reflected in the testimony of witnesses contained in the secret records of the Coroner.

QUIZZED ON JEALOUSY

Ab Walker, the last person at the party to see Smith Reynolds alive, was asked if Smith was jealous of his wife. Walker said:

"As far as reason for being jealous, I don't know."

Q.—"I didn't ask you whether he had cause—I said he was exceedingly jealous about his wife?"

A.—"I don't know. He was scared of their happiness."

Q.—"Will you answer the question as to whether or not he was jealous?"

A.—"I don't know."

Q.—"Had anything ever passed between you and Mr. Reynolds in regard to his wife?"

A.—"No."

Q.—"Except this one time when he said he didn't accuse you."

A.—"Yes, sir."

This last referred to the incident at the lakehouse on the estate when Mrs. Reynolds put her arm about Walker and whispered something in his ear and Smith later told Walker he had seen it but "didn't blame Walker for anything that happened."

Q.—"Haven't you repeatedly made the statement to people here since this occurred that he was jealous of Mrs. Reynolds?"

A.—"I have said this—jealousy to my mind is interpreting another man being involved in the woman's life. But he was scared that there was going to be something."

Q.—"Do you say then that he was suspicious of her?"

A.—"No, sir."

Q.—"What do you mean when you say: 'He thought something would be involved'?"

'LOOKING TO FUTURE'

A.—"I mean he was looking into the future of the thing. The reason I say this is because in the conversation we had in the hotel he said: 'Well, even if we do go this winter, I would be from 8 o'clock in the morning all day in school and she wouldn't get away from the theater until probably 1 o'clock and we would never see each other. And he was afraid something was going to break up this happiness of his.'

(Walker was referring to the night he and Reynolds spent away from home in a local hotel at which they discussed the plans of Reynolds for a second trip around the world.)

Q.—"Did Mr. Reynolds have any opposition to Mrs. Reynolds' remaining on the stage?"

A.—"No, sir. Mrs. Reynolds had asked if he didn't want her to give up the stage and he said: 'By no means.' And also in his conversation in the hotel he told me it was the last thing he would ever want her to do; that if she would ask him to give up aviation he would be terribly hurt but would do it and it would be the same thing with her."

RESCUED FLIER GASPS TALE OF HORROR

Injured Man Tells Of 17-Day Crawl In Jungle

MEXICO CITY, July 16.—(AP.)—Little by little today, as a wavering and halting voice came back to him, Clarence McElroy, American aviator who was rescued yesterday from the deep Mexican jungle, was able to tell snatches of the horror through which he lived for 17 days.

McElroy was taken to the little town of San Geronimo yesterday by a searching party half dead from starvation, thirst and an injured leg. He had been missing since June 27, when he took off from Vera Cruz in a plane he was flying to Honduras for delivery.

Roy Gordon, American resident of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, who was flying with him, was killed in the crash, which occurred in the midst of a terrific tropical storm.

The crash of the ship after the motor failed, left McElroy badly hurt, without food or water.

He arranged the wreckage to protect the body of his companion from jungle beasts, made a crude attempt to dress his injured leg and then started to crawl westward toward civilization.

Constantly on the alert to escape snakes and wild beasts and fighting off tropical insects, McElroy crawled his painful way. Yet so handicapped was he that he estimates he only covered four miles in nearly three weeks of crawling. The jungle at that point is well-nigh impassable and he had no tools to cut through.

Although he said he believed the wreckage was only four miles distant from where he was found, searching parties had not located it after a day's search.

BABY'S DEATH HELD ACCIDENT

MINNEAPOLIS, July 16.—(AP.)—A coroner's jury last night returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of Leslie Delano, 20 months, whose body was found in a cesspool near his home yesterday after he had been missing six days.

The verdict followed 4½ hours of testimony at an inquest called by Coroner C. B. Thurston, of Anoka County, who previously had announced evidence indicated the boy had been slain.

Much of the questioning dealt with the discovery of the body in the cesspool in front of the home of a neighbor of Leslie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Delano.

Walter Cuttrell, policeman, testified he had looked into the cesspool the day after Leslie disappeared, but admitted it was possible the body might have been overlooked.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP.)—Charges that the late Ivar Kreuger, "Match King," stole $50,000,000 in bonds before he put a bullet through his head echoed today through the maze of his frenzied finances.

The Irving Trust Company, which hurled the charge, started action to safeguard payment of $1,500,000 in interest on the bonds and was said to plan suits to recover the securities themselves for the bankrupt International Match Corporation, a Kreuger concern.

The complaint said the bonds, issued by the German government in 1930, were bought by the International Match Corporation, of which Kreuger was president. It was charged that Kreuger "did abstract, remove and take away" these bonds and deposited them to his own credit in a Swedish institution.

Mrs. Keaton left their Beverely Hills home shortly after July 4, Keaton said, and expected to return next Monday to announce whether she would remain away permanently.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Keaton sought the aid of the district attorney to halt Keaton from taking his two sons on an airplane ride to Mexico.

Dismissed at Miami U., Pittsburghers to Fight

MIAMI, Fla., July 16.—At the University of Miami, 10 department heads, including three Pittsburghers, were dropped from the faculty yesterday, upon orders of Dr. B. F. Ashe, president, and the board of regents.

Led by the Pittsburghers, S. S. Hoehl, former Arnold Preparatory Hoehl, formerly of Arnold Preparatory School and University of Pittsburgh; Dr. O. J. Sieplein, Grove City College, and Dr. Robert English, Washington and Jefferson professor, the faculty announced intentions to fight Ashe and his Pittsburgh aides, T. Holdsworth and Orton Lowe.

Hoehl and Sieplein said:

"We were given no intimation we weren't to be at the university next year. The notices, didn't explain why we were not told earlier, and made no mention of more than $20,000 due us in back salaries.

"Ashe states we are eliminated as an economy move, but others must be employed to take our places, and we are being penalized because we protested against conditions for which we believe Ashe is responsible. We intend to fight until the rights we have been denied are secured."

Recently 27 of the faculty rebelled against the Ashe administration. Ashe was investigated by the regents and exonerated. The regents are reported to be standing squarely behind him in the late outbreak.

'Getting Worst of It' Not Basis for Divorce

The Superior Court of Pennsylvania has vacated a divorce granted Estelle R. Hess, of 25 Grant avenue, Bellevue, in Common Pleas Court here from Edwin S. Hess, of 803 St. James place, East End. Justice Cunningham declared in an opinion:

"The natural inference from the facts appearing upon this record is that instead of this case being one of 'desertion' by a husband, it was a 'discarding' by a wife and her father of an undesirable husband and son-in-law.

"He appears to be more interested in visionary financial schemes than in the performance of his marital obligations and she may be justified in her attitude toward him, but she has not shown that she is entitled to a divorce.

"The testimony indicates that she got rather the worst of the bargain but that is not sufficient for the dissolution of the marriage contract."

The couple had lived at the Bellevue address. Mrs. Hess obtained a divorce, charging desertion. Hess, a traveling salesman, charged she deserted him and went to live with relatives.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Events

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

When members of the younger set read the wails of some of their elders about their sophistication, they just laugh, if they read the diatribes at all, and go off to the circus, for example.

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus last night attracted a group of society. Among them were Nancy Byers and Bertha Brooks, two of the debutantes of the coming fall, petite Nancy Doyle, Samuel Harbison, Charles Ramsburg, Frank Jarvis and Andrew Black III. And before the circus they had a picnic.

* * *

Dorothy Jarvis was there, also John Bowman, John Keeney, Betty Wright, Althea and Mary Robinson, Virginia Doyle, Belle Evans, Richard Cooper, Thomas Standish, Emily Frew and the junior Myron H. Wilsons.

Mrs. Wilson is the former Peggy Milligan. And she and her husband have come from Cleveland to visit her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan.

AMERICAN WOMEN ACHIEVING CONTINENTAL IDEA OF CHIC

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, July 16.—There may be something back of the legend that French women dress better than Americans. According to common fashion gossip, American women look well in their clothes, but few have a conception of a completely well-dressed result, while French women never buy a button without considering how it is going to help the general effect of her wardrobe.

* * *

IT TOOK an Englishman, Capt. Molyneux, to teach American women how to build up a costume to a final fashionable ensemble—at any rate, among this year's styles. A generous portion of Molyneux's summer collection of clothes has to do with assembled suits of both the dress-and-coat and skirt-and jacket varieties.

* * *

FOLLOWING the general Paris rule, Molyneux's ensembles go on the principle that the coat should conceal completely the idea of the dress or blouse beneath—that when either coat or jacket is removed, the dress or blouse should come as a complete surprise.

* * *

WITNESS THE costume in today's sketch. The long printed tunic, with its silk crepe skirt beneath gives the effect of a dress rather than a blouse-and-skirt combination; yet when the coat is worn the effect is one of a suit.

* * *

BOTH three-quarter coat and skirt are made of a heavy black crepe substantial enough to serve for either town or country. The coat takes the new single-breasted opening, and buttons from high neck to hem. It is worn without a belt.

* * *

THE TUNIC blouse, with its frill on the sleeves and at the hem, is printed in tiny black flowers over a white background. There are little groups of woven dots that break up the printed pattern. Bow-tie and belt are black.

Court's Appeal Right Upheld

Judge Sarah Soffel, of County Court, has given an opinion holding that her court has jurisdiction to hear appeals from magistrates who have fined employers failing to obey the state act requiring wages and salaries be paid semi-monthly.

J. Orvin Hall was fined $10 with the alternative of five days in jail, under the act, by Alderman G. K. Willock, of Knoxville. Hall appealed to County Court, and Judge S. J. McKim set September 12 for a hearing. A motion to quash was made by private counsel in the name of the Commonwealth, on the contention that the offense is a misdemeanor and should be heard in Quarter Sessions instead of County Court.

Judges McKim and Soffel heard the arguments July 7. Judge Soffel, in a decision yesterday, ruled it is a matter of summary conviction and appeal lies in the County Court.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Prohibition originally started out with us as a moral issue. It was either good or bad for you to drink. Then it drifted to economics. Did people save more when not drinking? Then into racketeering. But now it's drifted into the worst angle of any, that's politics. American history records no return of anything once it got into politics. The vote in the Senate the other day shows that not morality, economy or taxes entered their minds only, "How can my party get part of the beer, and all of the credit?" Beer has lined up with the postoffices as political loot.

Yours,
WILL.

CHILDREN HERE SUFFER FROM MILK WANT

Many children from two to 12 years of age in destitute homes are suffering for want of milk, it was revealed by relief agencies, as a result of curtailment of milk distribution, due to lack of funds.

Up until several months ago, children in relief-aided homes were given a pint of milk a day each, according to Miss Ethel Griffin, assistant director of the Family Welfare Association of Allegheny County. This practice was discontinued because of shortage of funds on the part of the Emergency Association.

The Pittsburgh Milk and Ice Association, the City of Pittsburgh and the different relief organizations are co-operating in supplying milk to babies under two years. No curtailment in this work has been necessary as yet, according to Mrs. Enoch Rauh, city director of welfare, and president of the Milk and Ice Association.

Miss Griffin said:

"We feel that a great many children are undernourished for want of milk. At present the only way a child over two years of age can obtain milk is by relief grocery orders given to the family, or in limited instances through a physician's prescription.

"The grocery orders are now restricted to 90 cents a week for each member of a family, making the outlay for a family of six, $6.30. This is hardly sufficient to provide milk enough for the children and food for the grownups with the result, we feel, that many children are suffering."

DOLLAR STRONG, IN PARIS

PARIS, July 16.—(INS.)—The rise of the American dollar on the French exchange continued today with an accompanying weakness in the French franc.

The dollar was quoted at 25.53 in francs a slight rise from yesterday's close.

Financial circles, in addition to hailing the end of the European attack on the dollar, also attributed the rise in American currency to the firm stand of the United States against cancellation of war debts.

Speculators were shifting from the British pound sterling and buying the dollar in large quantities.

Flagler Estate Sued to Save Railroad

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP.)—Scott M. Loftin, receiver for the Florida East Coast Railway Company, has filed suit in Supreme Court to compel the trustees of the estate of the late Henry M. Flagler to save the railway from going on the block.

He sought a court order directing trustees under the will of Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler Bingham, the widow, to use the income from a $12,000,000 trust fund established by her to pay interest defaults on a bond issue.

The railway, developed by Flagler at a cost of $35,000,000 of his personal fortune, was forced into receivership last August.

Wall Street Spectator

Stocks Stand a Good Chance of Extending Gains Slightly.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(INS.)—The action of the market yesterday indicated the list stands a good chance of extending its gains slightly further.

However, with so many unfavorable reports yet to come and dividend meetings such as United States Steel preferred, the risks are too great for any but nimble traders who can hit and run.

Even with the adjournment of Congress in the offing and the announcement of the approval of the four-party railroad merger plan expected after Congress goes home, there is still little for the market to move ahead except on technical and traditional causes.

Whatever happens in the stock market on the upside at least will be of little consequence unless the course is borne out by a similar movement in the bond and commodity markets.

Wisconsin's Public Service Commission may prove to be the nemesis of the holding companies through its action yesterday. The ruling of the commission in the Badger State is along the same line of reasoning as that handed down regarding the American Telephone subsidiary in that state. In that decision the utility body stated clearly the holding company must stand directly on its own feet and not act as a parasite on the earnings of the operating company. Curiously enough, the decision came at the same time the American Telephone earnings statement. The report was a direct illustration of what was meant. Telephone got $8,000,000 more from its subsidiaries than they earned.

DROP BARBECUE FIGHT PROBE

County Detective Michael Stabile, today announced he had no intention of questioning George and Frank Walters, of 748 Clarissa street, whose names were given detectives as having participated in a fight in a Becks Run barbecue is which one man was hit by a bullet and another beaten.

The melee occurred Tuesday and Mrs. Helen Robinson, proprietor, is said to have fired several shots at two men who fled from the barbecue, and one of the shots accidentally struck Walter Linet, of 650 Becks Run road, in the foot.

MARKET PRICE MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP.)—The stock market encountered some week-end profit-taking, after a firm opening today.

Price movements during the first half hour were narrow, and trading was quiet. Auburn backed up about a point, and United States Steel, American Can and Union Pacific slid off minor fractions. Case, Coca-Cola and Allied Chemical were up about ½ point, and American Telephone and American Tobacco "B" were slightly higher.

The final enactment by Congress of a relief measure which was believed to be acceptable to the White House, thus opening the way for adjournment of Congress, was the chief argument advanced by the bullishly inclined for higher prices, although it had presumably been in part discounted by the upturns of Wednesday and Friday.

Congress' continuous sitting since December had kept Wall street more or less on edge, what the uncertainties of possible legislation of profound economic import, but on the whole, banking leaders were inclined to express satisfaction, more or less qualified, with the measure actually enacted, and with the killing of proposals which Wall street deemed "radical."

Business and trade surveys appearing at the end of the week still reflected little save the summer stagnation, although various sections reported that retail trade was being fairly well maintained.

In foreign exchanges, the pound sterling opened about steady, with cables up ; at $3.54½. The French franc eased a little further, after dipping under par yesterday for the first time since March.

Street Hears Four-Party Rail Plan Approval Is Coming Soon.

Once more the market is showing strong inclination to look toward Washington for encouragement and "good news." The current rally had its inception, of course, in gathering indications that Congress is about ready to adjourn. But congressional adjournment is not the only phase of the situation which makes Washington news interesting. Railroad circles have been inclined to anticipate early action by the Interstate Commerce Commission approving the four-party merger plan. A report was around that the head of the Treasury Department would make a very bullish statement following the closing of Congress, but those who were in possession of this report professed lack of knowledge of its probable nature.

Much has been written recently concerning the vast number of listed stocks now selling in the open market for less than equivalent of the dividends paid annually two or three years ago. But declaration of the regular dividend on its preferred stock by the Cuba Railroad Company served to call attention to the curious position of that stock. Dividends are being paid at the rate of $6 annually, and the quarterly disbursement just ordered is at that rate of $1.50 a share. The stock, one of the inactive issues, in which 10 shares constitutes a round lot, sold at 4¼ just above the low and substantially under the current dividend rate.

Treasury certificates and notes were inclined to heaviness yesterday with investment circles ascribing the setback to liquidation by banks in preparation for new treasury financing. The treasury has an issue of $228,000,000 3½s maturing on August 1, and will be in the market to that extent plus whatever may be necessary in the way of new money for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, etc., though it is a bit early for reliable forecast, feeling in local circles is that new financing may involve anywhere from $300,000,000 to $800,000,000 depending on requirements.

Sugar and packing company shares, though it is not perhaps fully realized, have moved up in keeping with the improvement which has been taking place in raw and refined sugar and in hogs and cattle over the last six to eight weeks. Prominent sugar stocks listed on the "big board" and the curb show market appreciation from the recent low levels ranging from 65 to around 300 per cent. Principal packing company shares similarly show open market appreciation of from 71 to over 225 per cent from the minimums.

Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is offering to acquire all outstanding Class A and B shares of Pan-American Foreign Corporation, on the basis of $14.64 in cash on 5435-10000 of a share of Jersey Capital stock for each share of Pan-American Foreign payable in full upon deposit of shares. To take advantage of the offer, stock certificates of Pan-American Foreign must be deposited with the Corporate Trust department of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York before noon on August 15.

George B. Cortelyou, Jr., president of Distributors Group, Inc., sponsors of North American Trust Shares 1955 and 1956, the largest unit type investment trust, issued the following statement: "The attention of Distributors Group, Inc., has been called to an announced offer to exchange common stock of Atlas Corporation, a management investment company for shares of certain unit type investment trusts, including North American Trust shares, the offer in question was made without the knowledge of Distributors Group, Inc., and of course, without its sanction. Distributors Group has examined the proposal and can see no reason why holders of the trusts sponsored by it should desire to make such exchange."

VOIDING DEBTS OPPOSED IN MISSISSIPPI

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

JACKSON, Miss., July 16.—Taken as a sample of American public opinion in the interior, sentiment in this section, except among bankers, is strongly against cancellation of the inter-allied debt to the United States.

Debtors staggering under back-breaking mortgages, created when the commodity price structure was higher and hence when the real burden of interest payments was much less, are inclined to regard as academic the argument that wiping out of the debts would raise world prosperity, in which they would participate.

Mr. Rukeyser

If there are to be any more scaling down of debts, farmers and plantation owners here would prefer to start in with their own mortgages and debts, rather than France's, Great Britain's, Italy's and Belgium's.

SENTIMENT ADMITTED

Perhaps that attitude is provincial, but it is part of the whole situation. Bankers here, reflecting leadership in New York, concede that public opinion in the Mississippi Valley is strongly against cancellation, but add that the thinking people, meaning themselves, recognize that some revisions will have to be made.

Economic wisdom in the United States does not necessarily begin and end at Wall street. As Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of Columbia University, recently remarked to me:

"People in different parts of the country are not depending upon the New York Stock Exchange before they make an effort themselves to recreate business opportunities."

SELF-HELP APPROVED

He had in mind such self-help schemes as the one recently tried in Richmond, Va., which recently conducted a civic employment campaign and obtained 6,300 pledges to spend $2,500,000 during the next four months.

Such efforts are needed to overcome the tendency toward inertia, holding back, and sluggish turnover of money. As for the stock exchange, even those away from the financial center, who make faces at it, are watching quotations with hawklike attention for early indications for a decisive change in the situation.

Political criticism of the stock exchange was ill-timed, coming at a period when buying impulses were already frail. Criticism would be more socially useful when the bull pools are exploiting the credulous, rather than at a time when skepticism is in the saddle and hope temporarily non-existent.

SUPPORT SALES TAX

The intellectuals of this state are strongly behind Gov. Mike S. Conner's pioneering experiment with the sales tax. They like to appear before the country as progressives, instead of laggards.

Gov. Conner told me that the state had also pioneered in other directions, being the first to liberate women in respect to property rights and the first to open a state-owned college for women.

BANKERS 'HOARDERS'

Paul M. Mazur, investment banker, recently remarked:

"Banks are not banks today; the biggest hoarders in the country today are the commercial banks."

The commercial banker's reply is that one individual bank does not feel strong enough to buck the deflationary trend. In my opinion, co-operative machinery is needed to take advantage of the new credit facilities released since February 24 by the open market policy of the Federal Reserve System.

In order that the individual bank may know what other banks are doing, it would be well to adapt to the domestic situation the principle behind the German standstill agreement, which froze the total volume of credit at a given amount.

Domestic banks should be asked to sign a round robin agreement, pledging themselves not only to avoid further reducing the volume of bank credit, but also committing themselves to increase loans and investments by—say—5 per cent above seasonal differences by the end of the year.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Nostalgia

For if I have lived in this house too long, what then?
There still is the garden, with iris and hawthorne cool,
And high in the beech tree flashes the nesting wren,
And skies still mirror their blue in the quiet pool.

Who can drink stillness deeply or fast enough?
This was the hour I dreamed in a time gone by.
Peace is made from this rare and exquisite stuff—
A rose bent over with gold, a mirrored sky.

But if a step on the path should shatter the spell,
A step familiar as music on darkening air—
So on the peace of Eden—mischief fell
And woke another, more magical and more fair!

And I, no wiser than Eve and lacking her art,
Shall rise from quiet and welcome the storm again.
To know the thunder that shakes the somnolent heart,
Forget the rose, ignore the eloquent wren!

The Trap That Failed

Eliot Keen, one of the better movie star gazers, relays this one on Garbo. No one, he says, seems to know definitely what Greta intends doing, but Greta. And that her movie firm attempted a trick to find out her plans.

Bernie Fineman, of the publicity staff, was the fall guy. He went up to Greta and said:

"Well, Miss Garbo, I suppose this is good-bye. I guess I won't be seeing you again."

"Oh, yes?" indifferently replied Garbo. "You are going away?"

A New Low

Izzy Elinson knows a guy who is so unpopular that no one slaps him on the back—even when he's sunburned.

Imagine

The height of shiftlessness was reached in a Bronx shop last night when a patron ankled in and tapped his fingers impatiently on the counter. But the old gentleman behind the counter merely sat on his box and opened one eye.

"Well?" said the customer, "come on!"

"Wot's-a-matter," was the weary reply, "you couldn't come in when I'm standing?"

Add Similes

Jack Denny's:

"As disillusioning as re-reading your contract, after the first squabble."

Not New, But Clean

The windy argument over whether or not the late Smith Reynolds was left-handed brought back the tale of Bugs Raymond, the once renowned Southpaw of the N. Y. Giants. The highbrow members of the team used to kid Raymond via the big word route. And one day McGraw and Mathewson started talking about a pitcher in the sticks who hurled part of a game with his right mitt and part with his left.

"Why Bugs," Mathewson said, "do you know that feller is positively ambidextrous?"

"Yeah," Bugs replied, "he'd shoot you in a minute!"

Naturally!

It is supposed to have happened in one of the speakeasies the other middle-of-the-night. A well-known leading lady seated at the bar and acidly chirped:

"I begya poddin—but aren't you my husband's sweetheart?"

Life Is Like That

A salute and all that sorta thing to Miss Earhart and the others who span the seas by air, but how many names of those who've distinguished themselves in that reckless manner, can you recall?

The other week when Hausner was rescued after his plane fell into the Atlantic, his predicament was similar to another trio of fliers, who were rescued many days after they fell to the waves. The editorial department, however, couldn't think of their names. Nor can we, even now!

"Oh, you know," yelled the night city editor, who had only 20 minutes before press time, "one of them had to be carried to the City Hall reception!"

Fame, as F. P. A. once chirped, is as fleeting as a ferryboat shine.

Hehehah

In Hollywood the nicest thing you can say to newlyweds is:

"May all your children be Jackie Coogans."

'Crazy People'

Norman-Bel Geddes, the adroit scenic designer, and George S. Kaufman, the Pulitzer prize winner, were talking about "Another Language," the Comedy-drama hit at the Booth. Geddes, who gets himself mixed up now and then, remarked:

"Have you seen that show, 'A Different Language?'"

"Yes," twitted George, "and it's better than 'Jim Hur.'"

Derelict

You get your "smoke" and you sit and think,
And every so often you drink a drink.
Betimes you manage a comic fall
To lie on your back with your legs asprawl
And your mind in a sad condition.

Why do you lie in the blazing heat
On the searing stones of a Bowery street,
When you might be drunk, with a nicer grace,
On the burning stones of Sutton Place—
Haven't you any ambition?

—Arthur O'Hara.

Libby Holman

There have been all sorts of pen-pictures of Libby Holman in the gazettes, but the following from Noel Pierce's typewriter best sums her up. Miss Pierce penned it after seeing Libby in "The Little Show":

"Like a black and gold skyscraper inviolate before a heatstorm. Like an East River wharf on a thick, velvet night. Like strange drums beating through 'Emperor Jones.' Like a pulse in a savage throat. Like the scent of rare fruit. Like thunder beginning and lightning ending and hail stinging faces. Like a black orchid. Like a blue swan crying. Like a prelude by Gershwin!"

Cameras Snap Seashore Blaze

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Spectacular scenes of the five million dollar fire that threatened to destroy Coney Island, New York's famous seaside resort, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. Cameramen in airplanes flew over the devastated region securing remarkable aerial views of the conflagration and the several thousand bathers who watched the fire, knowing that their clothes and other belongings had been consumed. Ground views show the bath houses and other wooden structures burning fiercely. The pictures cover every phase of the disaster, and there is a vivid description by The Globe Trotter, who is heard in the Penn and Fulton and other theaters in the Pittsburgh district.

Italian, Finnish and Hungarian athletes are seen and heard as they arrive in New York to proceed to California for the Olympic Games. The visitors are welcomed at City Hall by Mayor Walker. There are also scenes from Japan taken just before the sailing of the Nipponese challengers in final tryouts.

HITLER SPEAKS

Uproarious scenes come from Munich and Berlin where Hitlerites and anti-Hitlerites engage in demonstrations over reparations arguments. Hitler himself delivers a speech before a tremendous crowd in Munich and is cheered with wildest enthusiasm. In Berlin an ever bigger demonstration is staged against Hitler by more than 100,000 Social Democrats in the Lustgarten.

Remarkable accuracy is shown by National Guard gunners in target practice at Fort Levett, Maine. Firing at floating marks 15 miles at sea, frequent direct hits are made by the 16-inch missiles from the Big Berthas.

OLDEST HORSE RACE

The oldest horse race in the world is run before a crowd of 30,000 on the Piazza del Campo, in Siena, Italy. Every year for six centuries it has been run and the horses are entered by farmers and cab and cart drivers representing different wards in the city. Keenest rivalry is shown and the horses make good time.

Beach belles of yesterday stage a beauty parade at Steeplechase Park, Coney Island. Most of the contestants are grandmas of 70 years and more, and the venerable flappers display more or less buxom figures which are measured by the judges. It's quite a contest!

Fine Picture In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Once in a long time there is a picture which demands superlatives. "The Doomed Batallion," in the Warner this week, is such a picture. Even if the story were weak and inadequate, the sheer beauty of photography would carry this picture. But the story is not weak. It contains all powerful elements of drama, love, honor, fear, dread, courage, temptation, loyalty and suspense.

Two mountain-climbing friends, Florian, an Austrian, and Arturo, an Italian, find themselves enemies in a war of their nations. Florian is one of the doomed men atop Collato, a critical mountain stronghold on the Austro-Italian front during the World War. It is Arturo's unfortunate lot to destroy the mountain and his friend.

Unable to capture Collato, the Italians dig a tunnel beneath to blow it to bits with dynamite. Day after day the doomed men above listen to the ominous rumble of the drills. Yet more awful than this noise, they dread the impending silence which will mean that the tunnel is finished.

Florian, the mountain climber, descends into the village to learn the fatal hour. Refusing to be tempted by his wife to remain and see his new born son, the intrepid soldier makes the steep, perilous ascent in the night to warn his commander that the hour of doom is at hand.

There are no "names" in the cast. But Luis Trenker will be known hereafter as the man who wrote the story and played the part of Florian in "The Doomed Batallion." And Tala Birell will be known as the girl who played "Maria," Florian's wife. Victor Varconi gives a good account of himself as "Arturo," and so does the cast, down to the last man. The icy winds of the mountain waste live in Dr. Guiseppi Becce's music which accompanies the picture.

Additional features include James Gleason in "High Hats and Low Brows" from Bugs Baer's Roughtown Stories; Tom Howard in "Pro and Con," and Fox Movietone News.

Picnic of Warner Club Listed for Sunday

The first annual Warner Club picnic is to be held at Dravo Park on Neville Island tomorrow. The Warner Club is a social organization of Warner Brothers Theaters and approximately the 800 employes in the Pittsburgh district are expected to attend the outing. Invitations have also been issued to many others.

Cars are to meet at the Stanley Theater at 11 o'clock, a. m., Sunday and will parade to the picnic grounds. Athletic events and many other entertainment features are on the program. The swimming pool will be open to guests.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Review of a Life

THERE ISN'T very much to this story because there wasn't very much to the life involved. Still, there's a great deal of irony in it—and not a little beauty. Listen:

It was just about seven years ago that I first saw Kitty Banks. The occasion was the Atlantic City pageant, and they were judging the preliminaries in the little schoolhouse that was bedecked with flags for the occasion. A number of girls—15 of them—were standing in a row, all hoping to be Miss America before another two days had passed.

The scene is very clear in my mind. Earl Carroll, one of the main judges, was rushing happily about, big badges hanging from his lapels and honeyed words dripping from his lips. Fay Lanphier, who was destined to win the contest and then drop into deepest obscurity, was posing prettily in every conceivable fashion.

Having just watched this same sham and nonsense for several seasons, it was all just a little dull to me. I walked from the schoolroom and looked out at a little group that had formed on the grass to the right. In the center of the group, confronted by three or four photographers, stood a very pretty girl in a bathing suit.

Pretty girls in bathing suits were a dime a dozen in those pageants, but this bid had more than the others. She possessed a definite charm. Black hair, done in little curls. Brown eyes that sparkled. A little nose that turned up in the cutest fashion. And a trim little figure that I would rather not attempt to describe.

I asked the man next to me who the kid was.

"That's Kitty Banks," he returned. "A Philadelphia girl. She just won the professional beauty contest, which doesn't mean very much. She's a chorus girl or something, I guess. Cute, isn't she?"

I nodded, and walked toward the girl. After all, reporting a beauty pageant had to have some compensations. Soon I was talking to her.

"I'm just 19," she said unaffectedly, "and I'm practically thrilled to death about all this. Of course, the professional contest doesn't mean as much as the other one—but I'm happy to have won it just the same. Wouldn't you?"

I tried to look as handsome as possible—a rather vain effort—and assured her that I would. We talked on.

"What is my ambition?" she smiled. "I feel successful when I'm asked that question. I'll stick to the stage, I guess. Hope to get somewhere, too.

"I'm so glad to have known you. Maybe I'll see you around Broadway some time. Going to live there soon, I guess. When you're going to make good on the stage, that's the place to be, isn't it?"

I nodded. There wasn't much else to do. She hastened away.

I liked Kitty Banks . . .

About a year later, I sat in a Broadway cafe. The same old story and the same old scene. Waiters. Smoke. Music. A cigaret girl. Fat men hiding lean bankrolls. Thin mammas holding stout hopes. Small hopes. Small talk. Cheapness. Boredom.

I had neither seen nor heard of Kitty Banks since that day in Atlantic City. I sometimes wondered about her, but that was all. The Broadway whirl has so many beautiful girls who come here to make good and then disappear.

The master of ceremonies, a gentleman with much nose and little ability, announced in a raucous voice that Miss Kitty Banks, from 'down Philly way,' would next appear. I sat up.

Yes, it was the same girl. And yet it wasn't. She didn't look well. Just as sweet as ever, but there was something wrong somewhere. Know what I mean? You sense those things somehow.

Her dance was over. There were a few cries of "attaboy" and "you'll do, honey." At a corner table a man, fat-jowled and obviously drunk, made a lunge for her hand as she passed him. Deftly, as if by practice, she avoided him. She disappeared behind a curtain.

I didn't speak to Kitty Banks that night . . .

Another year went by, and I wrote my first story about Kitty Banks in a newspaper. They told me that she had died in Colorado of consumption. And they told me how it had happened.

Seems as though she hadn't wanted to go in for cabaret work, but that she needed immediate money to support some members of her family. So she took the cafe work, and then overdid it by rehearsing for a musical show at the same time.

Every penny that she earned was sent to those who needed them most. During the winter months, she went about in the thinnest of coats and wore shoes that needed plenty of repairing. Several of the boys in the mob had attempted to help her, but she wanted none of them. Said she could get long by herself.

Then came that little cough that grew worse and worse. The doctors told her to go away, but she wouldn't listen. She had to earn money, she said. And when she finally went away she was carried. A few months later, they said, she was dead.

So I wrote the story almost as I've told it to you here. And when I sent for her picture to accompany the article, I found the following ironical notice on the back:

"Kitty Banks, Physical Culture Instructress." . . .

The kidding I received after that story was published was the severest of my alleged career. For Kitty Banks wasn't dead. She had been severely ill in the West, but she had pulled through in okay fashion. Thus, I had turned out a sob story with a slightly different ending. The subject was very much alive.

Some two years ago, I met Kitty Banks again. I was sitting in a restaurant with Mr. Barney Gallant when a pretty woman spoke to me from the next table.

"You can tell them in your column that you saw me, Mr. Hellinger," she smiled. "But please don't bury me again until it's actually time. I'm positive you remember me. The name is Kitty Banks."

I was very affable when I returned the greeting, but I felt a rather chilly something inside. I shook hands with her and I tried to cover my embarrassment by explaining that I had meant no harm in the article. She smiled again.

"Perfectly all right," she returned. "Besides, all that is a thing of the past. I'd rather forget it. I've beaten the disease, you know, and I'm going back on the stage very shortly. It has all turned out very beautifully."

I was glad . . .

* * *

Kitty Banks died in the N. V. A. Lodge, at Saranac Lake, about a month ago—and this time there can be no return. She died of the disease she thought she had beaten—consumption.

I told you there wouldn't be much to this story. Still, there is a great deal of irony in it—and not a little beauty . . .

Comedy Film Is Stanley Feature

By MARY SHINE

To know "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" is part of the birthright of every child, and if you have not yet made her acquaintance, then hie yourself down to the Stanley to meet her. To you who already know the story, as it flowed from the pen of Kate Douglas Wiggin, the talkie version may prove a disappointment. If she's an old friend of yours, this will refresh your memory, and if you'd like to know her, here is her history.

Rebecca Rowena (after Ivanhoe) Randall, is a little girl who is always happy-go-luckily getting into one jam after another. She goes to live with her spinster aunt, who first meets her as she crawls through the living room window wearing high button shoes and a pancake hat.

Rebecca's first friend as she arrives at her aunt's is Dr. Alan Ladd, who is having a hard time making the villagers like him and trust him. He finally cures Aunt Miranda of pneumonia. Everything's happy, with Rebecca, who is grown up by this time, falling in love with the doctor, and he with her, and Aunt Miranda becoming more agreeable every day.

Marian Nixon has the leading role, and falls into all of Rebecca's disgraces, and assumes her appealing qualities, but somehow her performance has an unnatural, stilted quality that detracts from the charming story. Ralph Bellamy is Dr. Ladd, and Louise Closser Hale plays the cantankerous Aunt Marinda to perfection.

After that, "Who! Me?" provides some slapstick and an animated cartoon jingles along merrily.

Human Bullet Feature At Kennywood

Victor Zacchini, the "human cannonball," will open a limited engagement of free afternoon and evening performances at Kennywood Park on Monday. Until his arrival, the "Sensational Maids" will remain at the park. Zacchini, a former major in Mussolini's army, is shot headfirst from a cannon weighing over four tons. Free concerts will be played at Kennywood tomorrow by Jayne Jarrell's artists. Ralph Harrison's orchestra will open an engagement at the dance pavilion Monday.

Capitals' Life Uncovered In Penn

By JAMES A. BAUBIE

Blood tingling patriotism! Fearless editorials against the lobbyists in our legislative halls and the Power Trust in particular. And one of the most compelling dramas of American political life to appear on the talkie screen, which has grown pale and anemic under the pelting of sex scenarios!

That is, at least, one way of viewing "Washington Masquerade," a picture that jumps at you like a headline from the day's news, which opened yesterday in the Penn.

And Lionel Barrymore—! Have you ever heard a great orator or a beautiful song or watched some unusually impressive sunset, that sort of left you tongue-tied? Barrymore leaves you like that. He literally rolls the story about on the tip of his tongue like a sip of wine, and makes it what it is.

PLOT IS SIMPLE

Simply, the plot is a common one, one that appears between the lines of countless news stories from Washington and the capitals of every state in the Union.

Barrymore, as Jeff Keane, smashes the crooked political machine in his midwestern state and becomes Senator Keane in Washington. Overnight he becomes famous as the people's mouthpiece and big stick against "invisible government."

Gradually he succumbs to a beautiful woman and her ambitions for wealth. For her he deserts the "folks back home" and plays into the hands of the powers."

CLASH OF DRAMA

The bitter futility of his love, the ruin of his reputation and the final fire of his patriotism clash like thunder in the final scene of the drama, before a Senate inquiry.

If Barrymore were an unknown actor, his fame should be made by this picture.

Other good bits of acting are turned in by Karen Morley, Diane Sinclair, Nils Asther and C. Henry Gordon.

Why Go to Any University When the Circus Has More to Offer?

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Give me the circus for an educational institution of the first rank, doing more to uplift and elevate and edify the people than all our universities and colleges. In what university or college can you see so many fine horses as in the Ringling-Barnum-Bailey show which yesterday came here again for two days? This means horses, not ponies. The automobile has nearly driven the horse out of business. But in the circus it is the king of beasts. And if there were no horses, there would be no beautiful equestriennes. And if there were neither horses nor beautiful equestriennes, there would be no circus.

The dog, also, has come into his greatest glory as an adjunct of the circus. He is almost as important as the horse, much more in evidence than the elephant, much more versatile than the educated seal. He comes in many disguises—as a pig, as a rabbit, as a tiny pony, as a toy elephant—but only a dog could impersonate these animals with such facility.

Mr. Seibel

Of course, all the horses are equines, and all the dogs canines, just as all the elephants are pachyderms—but that also is part of the circus frame of mind. You must get into that frame of mind to be uplifted, elevated and educated.

AWAY WITH NEWTON!

Einstein has been trying to show up Newton and the law of gravity, but the circus really does it—proving that there is no such thing as gravity. Don't the Wallendas and the Gretonnas defy equilibrium and poise themselves in comfortable armchairs on the slenderest of swinging wires? Doesn't Alfredo Codona, wizard of flight, do a thrilling triple somersault in midair?

And that old historic fable about the British blowing Hindu prisoners of war out of the mouths of cannons is completely demolished, for Zacchini shows that this can't hurt anybody—it's just a pleasing afternoon diversion a little more exciting than looping the loop or shooting the chute. Some of the little folks were very much alarmed over Zacchini's fate, screaming when he was hurled as a projectile at the grand stand. But Zacchini enjoys it—his only worry is that he might get so fat that he won't fit into the cannon any more.

AWAY WITH GRAVITY

Whatever is left of gravity after the equilibrists and balancers are through, is disposed of by the clowns. By their antics the last shreds of gravity are dispelled. Never have the clowns been more numerous and busy than yesterday afternoon. They walked on stilts, they advertised hair-restoring machines, they served as firemen, they were blown up by automobile accidents, they came as giraffes, they drew shrieks of laughter from the little folks—really, a clown is a benefactor of the human race, chasing gloom and worry over the hills and far away.

Many of the equestrian and acrobatic acts are enlivened by the presence of clowns who mimic the feats of the performers by their antics and tumbles. As the Wallendas do away with Newton, so the clowns put an end to Einstein and Freud by their mirthful revels.

But the greatest of educational advantages to be derived from the circus is the lesson in geography. There was even Bombayo, the first Hindu acrobat, bouncing on a rope as if he were a man of rubber. And there were Spanish, Argentine, Brazilian, Belgian, Italian and half a dozen other nationalities represented among the daring, unrivaled, amazing, unparalleled, sensational, marvelous, world-renowned and incomparable artistes performing incredible feats.

Today little boys by scores are trying to stand on their heads like Koban, who walks upstairs on his; and almost as many little girls are trying to rival Luicita Leers in her aerial trapeze whirl or Miss Theol Nelson in her long-distance tumbling. They have learned there is something in the world that makes life worth living and glory more than a word. Even the Ubangi savages, who aren't handsome, are different! And that is the most important lesson of all—to get out of the rut, to believe in the marvelous, to know there is a realm of superlatives and thrills. That is to be uplifted, elevated and edified—and the Ringling-Barnum-Bailey College does it.

Firemen's Pension Denied County Man

The rule against paying pensions from the city firemen's fund to retired men who are employed by the county has been upheld by the Pennsylvania Superior Court in the case of Harry E. Grieble, of the South Side, former captain.

The decision affirms the judgment of Common Pleas Court in favor of the board of managers of the fund.

RETURN OF ACE TO FORM AIDS BUCS

BETTER LATE THAN never, in the case of Remy Kremer. The failure of the veteran slab ace to get going during the first half of the season kept the Pirates from gaining a much longer pennant lead than they hold at present, but if his brilliant pitching yesterday may be taken as an indication of what he is going to do during the remainder of the season he is certain to be a tremendous help to the Gibsons in their struggle to hang on to the lead.

Remy Kremer.

It was a break for the Bucs to have Kremer reach form and pitch shutout ball in a game in which they got only one run. No other kind of pitching could have won for them on such a day, and it was the first 1-to-0 game of the season in the National League, barring a tangle between the Cards and Cubs on June 1, which went only seven innings. Since 1927 Remy has not pitched more than one shutout to a season, and in 1929 he got none, so that it was rather a fortunate turn of the fates that brought his annual whitewashing stunt in a game in which the Bucs scored only a single tally. And it's a far bigger break for the Rovers for the future, as it adds another high-class pitcher to the staff in time for the second tough Eastern trip, when the club's pennant chance is apt to hinge mainly on slab strength.

CONNIE MACK is entitled to give himself an extra pat on the back for his success in landing Jimmy Foxx in 1925 because he stepped in and grabbed the present home-run sensation after Foxx had been tipped off to two other major league clubs. Both the Yankees and Giants are said to have been asleep at the switch.

Mack's former slugger, Franklin Baker, then having a connection with the Yanks, advised Miller Huggins to sign the boy wonder. At the same time, Jack Bentley coaxed John McGraw to pick up Foxx without delay. Huggins waited and McGraw waited, and one day they awoke to find Jimmy signed by the A's.

SPEAKING OF OVERLOOKED bets, Mack appears to have scored over another club in the same way in the case of Pitcher Tony Freitas. Jack Doyle, Cub scout, urged the Bruins to purchase the little left-hander from Sacramento in the Coast League.

The Chicago management replied that he was too small. Doyle held that he was larger than Dick Kerr, Jack Warhop and others of the past and could win in the majors. The Cub bosses still refused and finally Mack made the buy. Freitas lost his first two games, but has since won five in a row.

ARNDT JORGENS, doing a swell job in holding up the Yankees behind the bat during the long suspension of Bill Dickey, is one of the few players in the major leagues born outside the United States. He is a native of Oslo, Norway. His parents came to this country when he was 2 years old. Jorgens did his first catching for Lane Technical High School in Chicago. His minor league experience was gained with Rock Island, Oklahoma City and Jersey City. Joe McCarthy thinks the present emergency will serve to make a fine catcher of Jorgens, whom he expects to improve as he goes along. McCarthy argues that a man must catch every day to become a great catcher. He says that the star marksmen do not catch 100 games in a season because they're great, but that they're great because they catch 100 games.

Randy Moore

IN RANDY MOORE, the Braves have one of those ball players who are very valuable to a club even though never successful in winning a regular position. Almost each succeeding visit of the Boston club to Pittsburgh finds Moore filling a different place in the lineup.

When obtained from Dallas after the season of 1929, Randy was a third baseman. He didn't stay there long for the Braves, Manager McKechnie making him over into an outfielder. On the last spring trip an effort was made to convert Moore into a catcher, and during the present series here he bobbed up as a first baseman to relieve Art Shiras, and yesterday as a third-sacker in place of Knothe.

THE OLD QUESTION, "What is a thoroughbred?" gets its latest answer from Col. Frank Moss in an article, "The Thoroughbred Horse." He says "a thoroughbred is a horse that traces on both sides of his pedigree (that is, his sire's and his dam's) without flaw to ancestors registered in the first edition of the General Stud Book, published in England in 1793."

The race record of the mare of a family, combined with certain known and proved strains of blood that she carried, determined registration rights when the book was published. Col. Moss says research, records and pedigrees show that every thoroughbred of today is a descendant of one of three horses—Eclipse, Herod and Matchem.

ONE OF THE arguments advanced against the idea of letting Ben Eastman qualify to represent America in the 800 meters as well as in the 400 meters in the Olympic Games without running in the former event in the present tryouts at Palo Alto, is that a similar step four years ago did not work out successfully. In 1928, Lloyd Hahn was exempted from competition for the 1,500 meters and was required to qualify only for the 800. He finished fifth in the shorter race at Amsterdam and went unplaced in the 1,500, crowding out a fresh runner who might have placed.

WHEN THE OLYMPICS are held, the last word on all contests, as usual, will rest with the permanent council of seven, of the International Federation. This body is the jury of the games. It is the committee that acts as referee, and its decisions are final.

In addition to the president and secretary of the International Federation, the permanent council includes one member each from the United States, England, France, Germany and Hungary. Murray Hulburt is the American member.

NO MATTER HOW long they have been out of the fight game, many of the old-timers eventually come back to it in one capacity or another. They just can't resist the lure. And, of all people, the latest is none other than Jim Corbett, former heavyweight champion.

Jim Corbett

Always an unusual fellow, Corbett is running true to form. Many a promoter, after taking it on the beezer time after time, has been forced to quit the game for his health. Corbett is coming in as a promoter for the same reason. He will try to quiet his nerves in the most nerve-straining business extant.

SINCE HIS HEAVYWEIGHT hope, Tom Cowler, was flattened by Jack Dillon in 1916, Corbett has had nothing more than a rooting interest in boxing. He confined himself to the show business and radio work until about six months ago, when he went down with an illness that left his heart affected. When the former champion had become tired of sitting in the sunshine at his Bayside home, his doctor advised him to take up something that would keep his mind occupied, so Corbett intends to become a promoter in the fall at the Jamaica Arena, a small club. He may be associated with Jack Curley. "I can drive to the arena from my home in 15 minutes, and will get a big kick out of being mixed up in the business again," Corbett said. "Perhaps I can develop a youngster or two. The game's biggest handicap is that the boys appear not to learn or improve.

TOLAN EQUALS RECORD FOR 100 METERS

By LAWSON ROBERTSON
Head Coach American Olympics Team

PALO ALTO, Cal., July 16.—The most magnificent gesture during the first of the two-day Olympic finals here yesterday was that made by Eddie Tolan, of Detroit, the great Negro sprinter, who turned in 10.4 seconds to tie the existing world record for 100 meters.

Tolan's race was one of the greatest ever run anywhere. He was off none too well and had to come from behind in the last 30 yards to catch the speedy Frank Wykoff. He ran on a track that had been harrowed some time before and thus was soft, and, in addition to all this, he raced against a stiff headwind.

Tolan served notice during the week of practice that he was at his peak and I feel that the man who wins the final today must beat Eddie.

EASTMAN DISAPPOINTING

Ben Eastman's race yesterday in the 400 meters makes me wonder if Ben hasn't been overworked. A great runner like Eastman should have had a lot more left at the finish than he did, and win by a wider margin and in faster time.

Bill Carr, of Penn, ran well within himself to win his 400-meter heat 1 2-10 seconds faster than Eastman. Bill is in great condition. Ben will have to keep close to those record times of his to catch Bill in the final.

There were no real upsets in the contests of this afternoon. The men ran or heaved weights in keeping with anticipated form and practically all the stars will be in the finals today.

The great performances of some of the men makes it a certainty that the finals will furnish the most spirited competition in athletic history of this country.

SEXTON SETS MARK

Lee Sexton, of the New York A. C., who has been improving tremendously as a shot putter through the last year, cracked the existing world record with a heave of 52 feet, 8 inches. This is the fellow I am sure will throw the shot 53 or more feet either today or during the Olympics in Los Angeles.

I have rarely seen a more remarkable exhibition of running than was shown by Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, in his 100-meter heat. He was off to an atrocious start—absolutely last and so far back that his cause seemed hopeless. But he came on with

MARE FAVORITE AT ARLINGTON

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP.)—The world's richest stake for 3-year-olds—the Arlington classic—will be decided at fashionable Arlington Park today for a pot of gold that will total $90,150. With it will go the 3-year-old championship of the American turf.

Thirteen, an unlucky number for some man's race horse, were named over night to battle it out for the rich prize with Top Flight, champion racing mare of the world, ruling as favorite. Faireno, winner of the Belmont, Dwyer and Shevlin stakes, was second choice.

There is a possibility that Sun Beau's track record of 2:01 4-5 may be shattered, as top flight has smashed every record she has has gone after.

Gusto, winner of the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park last month, and Stepenfetchit, triumphant in the Latonia Derby, cannot be counted out. Among the outsiders, Springsteel, owned by S. W. Labrot, of Baltimore, Md., was highly regarded and there also was support for Rehoboth, the entry of Dr. Fred Adams, of Baltimore.

Field Club Honors Carr, Golf Pioneer, Today

By TOM BIRKS

One of the leading pioneers in the progress of golf in Western Pennsylvania is being honored today as the Pittsburgh Field Club celebrates Uncle John Carr Day.

John W. Carr, who has held practically every executive position in the club with the exception of president, has resigned as secretary treasurer, effective tomorrow, and is going into retirement at his boyhood home at Port Henry, N. Y., to live with the memories of an organization that rose in 30 years from a cricket club to one of the outstanding golf clubs in America.

It was away back in 1902, just 30 years ago, that Carr joined the Pittsburgh Field Club, then known as the Cricket Club, and dating back in 1882. In 1902, the club was located at Braddock avenue and Forbes street, and consisted of nine holes, made up of three fields, three short holes in each field. Board fences were used for bunkers, and the players had to shoot over them.

John W. Carr

In 1913, the present property was acquired, and it was completed in 1914. Carr was elected to the board of directors in 1916, and was vice president in 1917 and 1918. In 1923, he was elected secretary-treasurer, succeeding Howard De Van. He was chairman of the grounds committee under the presidency of Clarence Overend, and during that time quite a number of changes were made in the layout of the course.

Carr also is a vice president of the Seniors organization, and chairman of the executive committee of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association.

In 1924 the Field Club clubhouse was burned to the ground, and Uncle John was selected by the board of governors to study the makeup of practically all the modern clubhouses in Chicago and Philadelphia, and the present locker room of the club is virtually a duplicate of Glenview, Chicago. It was completed during the presidency of A. J. Diebold, and was formally opened July 4, 1925.

GENIAL CONTACT MAN

Uncle John can look back with pride upon his achievements as contact man for the Field Club. It was his genial smile that made the visitor and the new member welcome. And it was his work, together with that of Ed McCoy, that brought the caddie welfare movement to such a high plane.

While it is not generally known, it was through the efforts of Carr that Mayor Magee turned over the Public Links course at Schenley Park to the people of Pittsburgh.

Uncle John tells of his first talk with Billy Magee, asking that the course be thrown open to the public. The Mayor replied the people were not interested in golf, only old men and millionaires playing the game. However, he was induced to take a look at six public links in Chicago, and, after watching the throngs in Jackson Park lined up to play, he had a different idea regarding public links golf.

Uncle John will pass the remainder of his days on the peaceful shores of Lake Champlain. While he will not be with the Field Club members in the flesh, his spirit will remain here.

GUS TOSSES SHIKAT

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—(AP.)—Gus Sonnenberg, erstwhile Dartmouth football star credited with introducing the flying tackle to wrestling, triumphed over Dick Shikat, of Philadelphia, last night, using his specialty to hurl Shikat from the ring and win the fall in 33.52.

JONES, TIDBALL NET FINALISTS

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 16.—(AP.)—Smothering his higher-ranked opposition with terrific service and accuracy, Dave Jones, of New York, yesterday qualified for the final in the fortieth renewal of the historic Longwood Bowl championship.

Jones swept through the first eight games against W. F. (Junior) Coen, Jr., and put that young, but experienced Kansas City player out of the tourney in straight sets, 6-0, 6-4, 6-2.

Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, gained the other place in the classic final by subduing Berkeley Bell, the New York Texan for a 7-5, 6-3, 6-3 victory.

The defeated semi-finalists then teamed and gained the title round in the doubles play from Eugene McCauliff, of New York, and Jake Hess, of Fort Worth, Tex., 6-1, 7-5, 2-6, 5-7, 6-2.

In the other semi-final, Tidball and Elbert Lewis defeated Keith Gledhill and Joe Coughlin, the top-seeded team from Los Angeles, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4, 8-10, 6-4.

What should prove to be another highly interesting double-header will bring to a close this afternoon the long and stirring series between the Braves and Pirates. The first clash of the bargain bill will get under way at 1:45 o'clock.

Each club having scored two triumphs in the four battles staged, the action of today is sure to be of a very aggressive nature—especially when one considers that the competing clubs have pennant ambitions.

George Gibson's fighters hold to their two-game advantage over the runnerup Cubs by reason of their victory of yesterday. The Boston scrappers have dropped to a point four and one-half games behind the Oakland pacesetters, but still Bill McKechnie and his men realize that the race is just about half spent and therefore is an open fight.

Gibby will use Heine Meine and either Steve Swetonic or Bill Harris as sharpshooters in the day's struggle. Meine is set for the first clash. Swetonic will twirl in the nightcap, provided his stone bruise has healed sufficiently. If not, Hard-luck Bill will grace Fogarty Knoll. Pie Traynor may play in one of the games.

Bobby Brown and Huck Betts, McKechnie's two slab aces, are primed for mound action, but there is a possibility that Skipper Bill will use Southpaw Ed Brandt in one of the contests, despite the fact that Eddie has had but two days' rest since he trimmed the Buccos. McKechnie yanked Hub Pruett out of dugout obscurity yesterday and the stellar effort of the veteran lefthander was good enough to win in at least four days out of five.

Remy Kremer's slab masterpiece was all that saved the Bucs from a setback in the fourth game. The dean of the Pirate hurling corps looked like the Kremer of old as he shut the door in the faces of the Braves through nine very fast, yet fascinating innings. The resultant 1-to-0 triumph of the Buccos was the result of the punch of Dave Barbee and the speed of Kid Vaughan, the shortfield sensation.

Kremer had to reel off a three-hit classic to gain the decision for Pruett, lifted from Newark several weeks ago, let the leaders down with five safeties.

Wing-footer Vaughan singled to left in the fourth with one out. Dixie Dave waited for a slant he liked and kissed it on the trademark. As the smash rattled around the numbers on the scoreboard, Vaughan streaked the three-quarter distance and slid over in safety with what proved to be the only counter of the game.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

WASHINGTON, July 16.—I see they're teaching baseball in Soviet Russia and in a few years I suppose Stalin will be sending out threats he's going to grab the world championship from America and plant the pennant in Red Square.

Nick Altrock

It would be interesting, at least, to be really fighting ball clubs from other nations for the championship of the world. Can't you imagine Moscow battling Caponegrad (formerly Chicago) in a world series? I'll go right down to the capitol and have Borah get this thing arranged.

And, oh, I forgot to say the players would have to share their world series dough with the peasants. So I'll tell Borah to forget about it, after all.

TRIBE'S WIN STREAK HALTED BY YANKEES

GOMEZ VICTOR AS FERRELL IS CHASED

Associated Press.

Cleveland's wild ride through the Eastern sector of the American League was halted yesterday when the Yankees knocked Wes Ferrell from the hill and won, 8 to 5. Lefty Gomez scored his fifteenth victory.

Washington ran its winning streak to seven straight at the expense of the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 7.

Despite Al Simmons' three home runs and a double, driving in six runs, the Athletics dropped a 11-to-10 decision to Detroit in 11 innings. Jonathon Stone hit two homers for the Tigers.

WHITE SOX WIN

The Chicago White Sox again picked the eleventh inning in which to defeat Boston, 4 to 2.

Remy Kremer, all but forgotten in the excitement created by his younger teammates, was turned loose against the Boston Braves yesterday. The result was a 1-to-0 victory for the Corsairs, and in the process, Kremer allowed just three hits, two of them by Wally Berger. It was only the second complete game for Kremer this season, and in the other he was beaten by the same Braves.

WARNEKE WINS THIRTEENTH

Matching the leaders stride for stride, the Chicago Cubs humbled Brooklyn, 8 to 3, and Lonnie Warneke registered his thirteenth victory. Charley Grimm knocked in four Cub runs with a home run and a single.

The Phillies fought 12 innings before they subdued Cincinnati, 4 to 3. Red Lucas' string of 18 complete games pitched was broken when he was relieved by Benton in the tenth, and Benton was charged with the loss.

Fred Lindstrom's homer with the bases full and Mel Ott's four-bagger with three on featured the Giants' 12-to-4 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Three-Eye Loop Forced to Quit

DECATUR, Ill., July 16.—(AP.)—After operating since 1901, with only the war year, 1918, as the sole interruption, the Three-Eye League today had given up for the season.

The oldest class B league in the country and a training ground for many who later starred in the major leagues, it finally was forced to call it a season last night when it became known that the Quincy club could no longer compete with non-paying attendances. Decatur dropped out Tuesday, and the Danville franchise operated by the St. Louis Cardinals, was transferred to Springfield, Ill., which had been forced to the wall. The move was made in order to attempt to finish the season with four clubs, but Quincy, failing to obtain help from a major league club, made the foldup certain by collapsing.

Generals May Keep Mid-Atlantic Post

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., July 16. (AP.)—A series of conferences with leading business men and baseball fans of the city were held yesterday by Elmer M. Daily, president of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League, with the object of retaining Clarksburg's franchise, if possible. Harles Clark, club owner and president, surrendered the franchise because the club has not been paying.

Daily said today that the outlook seemed "very good" for retention of the franchise in Clarksburg but that nothing definite had been arrived at as yet and that a formal statement on the situation would be made by him later.

Husbands Should Not Take Wives for Granted

Want a model husband—a practically perfect guy, guaranteed not to chase, gamble, jump his job or come home spifilicated; in short, a big boy who simply dots on his home?

Want a lad like that?

Then he's yours for the taking. Indeed, Joan might be induced to give you a bonus with him, for she'd fed up on being married to that man.

And why? There's plenty of why. Listen!

Dear Sally:

I've read a lot of the problems your readers have brought you, but I never thought I'd be bringing one myself. However, it's got so I can't go on without telling somebody, so here goes. Please help me.

I have been married eight years. My husband is young, good looking and a fine provider. I also am the proud mother of a darling son, five years old. But here's where the trouble is.

ALWAYS TIRED

When my husband comes home in the evening I know he is generally tired. He works hard all day. But—well, he just eats, sit down and reads the paper or a book, and then after a bit hits it off to bed.

He doesn't leave me alone or run around. He doesn't care to. In fact, I suppose you'd call him a "model husband." But it seems as if I just can't stand things going on this way much longer.

I am of a very affectionate nature, while he is as cool as a cold potato. If he would only pet me, talk to me, kiss me once in a while, or act in any way like he thought I was human—or thought of me at all—I would be happy.

But, no! He is always "too tired" or something, or wants to finish something he is reading. If I even try to start a conversation he just grunts, though I will admit that he romps and plays with the baby sometimes.

LOSING INTEREST

Most of the time he seems to take it for granted that I'm just a sort of hired girl. I am 24 and called attractive by many, but I might as well look like a scarecrow, so far as he is concerned.

What do you think of a man like that, anyway? What is wrong with him? Why does he act that way?

And what shall I do? Shall I act just as cool and aloof as he does? It will be awfully hard, as I am quite the opposite of that.

Now don't get the idea that I feel abused. I don't. But I do feel that I am losing interest in being alive. I wonder, sometimes, what on earth he is thinking of, and what he thinks I get out of living like this.

I don't even know, any more, whether I love him or not. I have been sort of snubbed so often. It is driving me crazy.

JOAN.

He isn't snubbing you, really, Joan. He is just taking you for granted—and you are letting him. He has stopped trying to be an adventure to you because you have stopped being an adventure to him.

You didn't let him "just sit around and grunt" when he was courting you. He had to hustle then to keep up with you. Make him hustle now, and, man-like, he will value the thing he works for.

Don't be freezy and don't be fretty, but start something, sister. The next time he parks himself in a chair, smile sweetly, park the baby with him, then put on your hat and get going. Go out somewhere—to a girl friend's or to a movie.

AROUSE HIS IMAGINATION

Don't do anything cheap that would lower your own self-respect, but stage a little passive rebellion by stirring up his imagination. Assert your rights and you'll get them, kid.

And now just a word to other huddling husbands:

Is that a picture of you, big boy? Do you take it for granted that just watching you sit like a bump on a log is such a treat for the little woman that she should be perfectly happy and satisfied?

Do you come home and slump?

If so—why so?

And do you think you're giving her a square deal? Would you like it, if she treated you that way?

"THE SALESMAN"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

The minstrel of the days of the knight in steel and velvet was supposed to amuse the Princess—the lady of the castle. To sing her songs of love and legend that had nothing—save under the rose—to do with himself. To amuse. To worship—if he must—secretly. The young man today who romances to the young lady his glance has fallen and lingered upon, his heart is toasting for, and his head is in a coma for, does not pass on the song of love and legend and fancy for to amuse. He sells himself! He paints his tuneful picture for his own sake. And what a picture! Just as colorful, much more livable, sweeter in every way than ever the vision of love that was current in those intriguing but fearsome-for-a-lady knighthood days was.

Gloriette listens. She is impressed. Eros listens, and is impressed. Says Gloriette, "But we will have to live on bread-and-cheese-and-kisses! These are days of depression!" Says Eros, "By cookie, he's doing fine. I can see it myself!"

What do you think Gloriette answers to this ardent salesman, in the end? If she thinks his eyes the nicest in the world? His ties the best of all taste? His hands the most capable? He himself the most astonishing young man in the world? I think he was sold, he and his pictures of love for two, before he began.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Birthday Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to attend the celebration of a lady's eighty-first birthday this month. I am wondering what would be an appropriate gift to take her. Could you kindly suggest something? Z.

Books probably would be an appropriate present, or lovely white sheer linen handkerchiefs, plain or monogrammed. Or a beautiful box of flowers sent to greet her on the morning of her fete-day. Or a leather portfolio or writing-case. Or a scarf. Or a photograph frame, of leather or silver or crystal. Or a purse. Or gloves. Or a box of letter paper.

Addressing Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When addressing announcements to friends or relatives who have more than two in the family, should I address them like this: Mr. and Mrs. Blank and Family, or should I omit "the family"?

2. If there is only one daughter or one son, should I write Mr. and Mrs. John Blank and Son (or Daughter)?

3. If I send an announcement to a close friend, should I send it to just her or to her parents? D.

1. We mustn't ever use that form of ". . . and Family." And there are always ways of circumventing this. How we plan depends on the number of invitations we are allowed or may have. If we have a generous enough supply, we may send one addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams Blank, and one to each other member of the family we wish to.

If we wish to use only one invitation for a family, then we address it in the form that will give most compliment to the individual members. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams Blank
The Misses Blank
(or Miss Mary Blank)
The Messrs. Blank
(or Mr. George Blank)

2. No. Write the name underneath:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams Blank
Miss Mary Blank
or
Mr. George Blank

3. If you know the parents well, or even somewhat, send the announcement addressed as I have indicated in the second answer.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

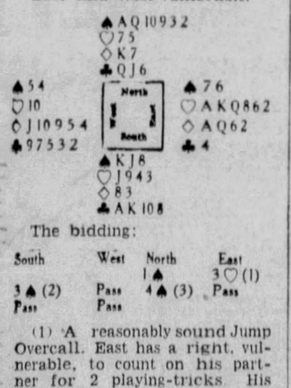
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Drawing Correct Inferences

Bidding, as I have frequently stated, is a prediction of the trick-taking power of the hand, provided a certain suit becomes the final declaration. Such predictions must have a solid basis in the possession of honor-tricks and distributional values, otherwise partner cannot rely upon the bidding, and hence cannot draw correct inferences as to the position of important honors, which is frequently an essential factor in the correct defensive play of the hand. The defending players are at a considerable disadvantage compared with the Declarer, who knows where he is weak and where he is strong. Hence it is essential to correct defense that a player be furnished with the information upon which he may base his inferences, and it is also an important factor in accurate defense that inferences drawn from the bidding have a sound basis in reason.

The hand below is an example whereby the West player, through his partner's bidding, was enabled to draw a correct inference and thus defeat the opposing contract.

North—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1♠	3♡ (1)
3♠ (2)	Pass	4♠ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) A reasonably sound Jump Overcall. East has a right, vulnerable, to count on his partner for 2 playing-tricks. His trump suit is both long and fairly solid. With a favorable break in trumps, he is sure of 7 tricks in his own hand.

(2) South slightly stretches his hand to give his partner a Raise, but, with his length in the adversely bid suit, he reassons that his partner is probably short in it and is not quite strong enough to double the adverse declaration.

(3) North, with his additional length in trumps, although holding only a bare Opening bid, tries for game.

In the play, East opened with the King of hearts, and followed with the Ace. The usual play would be for West to discard, and hope that somewhere the tricks to defeat the contract could be discovered. In this case however West mentally reviewed the bidding before making his play. His partner, vulnerable, had made a Jump Overcall over North's Opening bid. This bid guaranteed more than 3 honor-tricks, and obviously none of these honor-tricks were in clubs. Therefore, they must be in diamonds. If, as seemed probable, East's honor holding included the Ace-Queen of diamonds, then it was essential that West be in the lead at the earliest possible moment in order to lead that suit through the King, which must be located in the North hand. West, therefore, trumped the second round of hearts and led the Knave of diamonds, thus assuring the defending players 2 tricks in diamonds, which, with the heart King and West's ruff of the heart Ace defeated the contract which would have been assured had not the West player realized to the full the defensive possibilities of his hand.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

Today's Question:

South—Dealer.
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♢	2♠	Pass	2NT or 3♣
Pass	?

What should West bid, holding ♠AQJ32 ♡AK743 ◇8 ♣K5

Answer: West should bid four hearts, allowing partner to choose between the two suits. It is impossible to apply a count of playing tricks in a case of this kind, and the player must bid by a process of mental play—that is, by visualizing possible losers and the chances of eliminiating a sufficient number so that the contract can be fulfilled.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Overhears Girls Discussing Owen

I forgot my pique at Dicky's teasing in my astonishment at his comment that probably Ronald knew all about Charles Owen's designs upon Marion and was "suffering the tortures of the infernal regions over him."

"I don't see how you deduce that, Dicky," I said. "From all that both Lillian and Mary have told us, Owen appears to have kept his wooing very much under cover."

"Have you ever heard of an article called 'Love's Intuition?'" he asked. "If the lad's in love with Marion—and if he isn't he's been giving a most convincing imitation—you can bet your last pound sterling that he's hep to every move the wily Charley has been making."

"If that's true," I said with spirit, "then I'm going to get him to tell me about it before I give him any information."

"And when he's told you"—Dicky's voice was suddenly sober—"it is permitted to ask what you're going to say to him?"

"I don't know myself, yet," I said slowly, "but I'm sure of one thing. Either I shall make Ronald understand the 'why and wherefore' of the opposition stunt that Lillian intends to stage, or she won't stage it."

"'At a girl!'" Dicky grinned widely at me. "Ronald's tender susceptibilities will be safe with you. But, honestly, old dear,"—his voice suddenly lost its mirthful note—"you're doing exactly the right thing. Ronald's too fine a kid to be given a run-around like that, unless he knows what it is all about. When are you going to get busy on the stunt?"

"The very first minute I can get hold of Ronald," I said. "But I want to talk to Mary, first of all."

"Going to tackle her before dinner?" Dicky asked.

"Yes, if possible," I answered. "Going to tell her that Noel is expected at the dinner?"

"I hadn't intended to. Do you think I ought?"

"Why not? She probably will be very glad to know that he isn't dining with old Phil and the Arlen bunch, and she's a good enough actress so that she won't spoil the verisimilitude of the surprise Noel's staging. As long as there's no danger that Papa doesn't smell out the fake, nothing else matters. But if you want to see her before dinner, how are you going to cut her out from the rest of the fillies?"

"I shall simply tell her I want to see her," I said. "Marion and Carolyn won't think anything of that. They're used to my summoning one of them at any time. And if you don't mind, I'll hunt her up now."

I walked down the hall to the room which Mary, Marion and Carolyn were sharing. There is an old-fashioned transom above the door, and as it was wide open I could not avoid hearing the fragments of a colloquy that floated out to me.

"I wish Mother would let me have a black evening dress." This rhapsodic utterance was Marion's; but the silvery, faintly derisive laugh that greeted it was Mary's.

"What an old, sophisticated baby it is!" she said. "Black, forsooth! I'm disappointed in you, Marion. I thought you were original, but I see you're like all the rest of the boarding school girls. When they get to be 16 or 17, they yearn to look 30—in black."

"Miauw! Miauw!" Marion's usually unruffled voice held a distinctly petulant note, although she gave a little laugh as she spoke the words. "Just because you're not a knockout in black, yourself, is no reason why you should object to another girl wearing it."

"Are you two at it again?" Carolyn struck into the colloquy, her voice expressing infinite weariness. "I'm so tired of hearing you make these cracks at each other that I could scream. Why don't you come out into the open, and own up what's eating you?"

"What do you mean?" Marion's voice was suddenly shrill, but the only sound from Mary was an amused, exasperating chuckle.

"I mean simply this," Carolyn said, with the appalling frankness of the younger generation. "Why don't you put on a scrap of 10 rounds, the winner to take that motheaten old Owen, the loser to quit crabbing about him."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Attacks of Croup Frequent in Delicate Children

Some delicate children have sensitive nervous systems, with a tendency to catarrhal conditions and they are the ones who are liable to contract croup.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is seldom found in babies younger than six months, and is most common between the ages of six months and three years. False crop, as the doctor calls it, is a spasm of the larnyx, the upper part of the windpipe, and is accompanied by difficult breathing.

The disease is thought by many to be due to an infection, but this has not been definitely proved. The fact that exposure to cold and dampness often bring on an attack would seem to be against this theory.

When a child apparently in good health develops a hoarse, barking cough this is always regarded by parents as a "croupy" cough. The child should be kept in a room of even temperature because the cough usually grows worse as the coolness of night approaches. The child may go to sleep as usual, but some time during the night awaken with a cry of distress, and clutch its throat in an effort to get its breath. Breathing is done with a loud whistling sound, and the child's face is congested and has a look of acute distress.

The severity of the seizure subsides gradually and disappears in from one to three hours, and then the child sleeps quietly. In the morning it may awaken seemingly little the worse for the croup, but there may be another attack the next night, or even on a third night. This is very apt to be the case if the child is not treated to relieve the congestion of the larynx.

Every mother should know what to do until the doctor comes. Hot applications applied to the throat and chest, and steam inhalations, often give relief. A drink of hot milk, if the child can be induced to swallow, is excellent.

Between attacks a nourishing diet should be given, building up the general health. If the child is of an irritable, nervous temperament, he should lead as quiet a life as possible. A physician should always be consulted in regard to the condition of the throat, as the tonsils and adenoids may require attention.

THIRD DEGREE DEATH SIFTED

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 16.—(AP.)—Whether a "third degree" killed Hyman Stark, 20-year-old prisoner who died at police headquarters after eight hours' questioning, was the subject of vigorous inquiry today.

Stark, who was accused of beating Detective Joseph Hyzensky's elderly mother almost to death in a robbery, died last night under mysterious circumstances. Police refused any details.

Inspector Frank E. McCahill said he was unable to give the cause of the youth's death until he received an autopsy report.

He said:

"If I find that the prisoner died as result of any assault or attack by members of my department you may rest assured that I take action."

TRAIL OF SILVER TRAPS BANDITS

GREENVILLE, Ga., July 16.—(AP.)—A trail of silver dropped as three robbers fled from the Bank of Grantville, after they had held it up yesterday, led to the slaying of one of them and the capture of his two companions.

Passers-by, noticing the coins, found Edwin Brasch, cashier, locked in the bank vault. He shouted the combination to them and was released.

Pursuit of the robbers ended when the sheriff's posse overtook them here. Arthur Pendergrass, 28, was killed in an exchange of shots. Pendergrass' companions, C. P. Carver and Jack Wilkerson, surrendered.

GOV. ROOSEVELT ENDING CRUISE

ABOARD YACHT MARCON, OFF MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 16.—(INS.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's leisurely six-day cruise along the rugged New England coast on the 40-foot yawl, Myth II, was drawing to a close today, with the Democratic presidential nominee anxious to get back on the political firing line.

The trim little yawl, with the Governor at the wheel, as usual, sailed out of fashionable Marblehead harbor early today bound for "Voyage End" at Portsmouth, N. H.

Providing he gets an even break with the wind after rounding Cape Ann, the Governor was confident he would be able to negotiate the last 40-mile leg of the cruise and drop anchor before nightfall in Portsmouth harbor.

As brown as an old sea dog from his week's sail in the boiling sun and biting wind, Gov. Roosevelt said he was in "fighting trim" for the presidential battle which lies ahead.

ROADHOUSE MEN TO SETTLE CASE

Alderman Edward Haas has reserved decision on five former owners of the Plantations roadhouse, arraigned yesterday by representatives of the State Department of Labor and Industry, on charges of failing to carry compensation insurance on employes. The case grew out of a fire which destroyed the roadhouse a year ago, injuring Anna Barnhart and Enid Harris, employes.

The accused are Edward Kline, Al Steel, Charles Wolf, Andrew Garavini and John Duffy. It was charged both girls suffered injuries which kept them in the Allegheny General Hospital several weeks. The decision was reserved, with consent of Edward Geis, representative of the Labor Department, pending a settlement.

DISMISSED MEN TO GET HEARING

Hearings on appeals of 12 police and firemen, discharged by Mayor Charles H Kline as an "economy" move, will be granted by the Civil Service Commission at any time acceptable to Alex Lindsay, counsel for the ousted men, according to Dr. Samuel Johnson, of the commission.

The commission met yesterday for the first time since wholesale dismissals in the Safety Department were ordered by the Mayor.

Several of the ousted men who have appealed are now out of the city. All will be notified by registered letters when the hearing dates are set.

Meanwhile a Central Labor Union committee, headed by John Hoehn, was seeking a compromise with the Mayor to reinstate 31 dismissed men. After a conference with the Mayor Wednesday, Hoehn's committee said it might be possible to reach an agreement.

Tom Let Out at the Bank But Lets Lynn Think That He Resigned

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Norton said, "Very well, we'll leave her out. But you have admitted that you've taked. To whom, please?"

"It doesn't matter," Tom said, white. "Not to anyone who—who—" He broke off. Rawlson? No; again that was impossible.

"You haven't shown much interest in your work," Norton argued. "I've given you every opportunity. The fact that you could go out of this office and discuss the private affairs of the bank lightly shows me that you do not hold your position here in deep concern. When I placed you here I had hoped that you would fit yourself for a more responsible position. But unfortunately you show no such inclination."

"If my work isn't satisfactory ——" began Tom, very white now.

"It has been satisfactory as far as routine goes," Norton assured him, "but no farther. Tom, do you refuse to tell me with whom you have been discussing the projected merger?"

"I haven't discussed it, except to mention it to people within the bank, who hadn't—who couldn't—"

He had floundered long enough. Norton took pity on him. Lynn Harding, of course. He had talked to Lynn; she had talked to—heaven knew whom. Yet he wasn't so sure. Lynn had always seemed a levelheaded girl; Miss Dennet thought highly of her.

TOM LET OUT

Well, it didn't matter. It was possible that if Tom had talked his talking hadn't affected things. But the point was that, having talked, he had proved himself unworthy of trust, Norton said so now.

"Never mind. I'll take your word for it; I have to. But whether or not you've done the organization harm by your conscious or unconscious indiscretion is beside the point. The point is, we can't afford to have young men who gossip. I'm sorry, Tom, but—"

"I'm being fired?" Tom asked quietly.

"I'm letting you go," Norton substituted the more courteous term. "You aren't particularly happy with us; why should you be when you're not interested in the work? And this incident has proved to me that you take your obligations far too lightly. I'm sorry, Tom."

Tom was sore, bruised in his mind and in his pride. He couldn't, he thought ruefully, now say, "Take your old job; I've got me another. I was going to resign when you sprang this on me."

If he resigned as an anti-climax Norton would believe more than ever that he'd had it up his sleeve as a way out in case he was caught; or that it was a lie, to save his face.

Somehow, he got out of the office.

On the following Monday Tom went to work for the U. B. C., shooting skyward in the express elevator, passing the first six floors with a sense of discomfort. Once in his new job, he was to accustom himself to curious hours.

He might get to work at 8, stop at 11, return at 3 and work until night. Or most of his work might be afternoon and evening. For this reason he was to see less of Lynn, calling her up at odd times to report progress and peace of mind, running in to see her evenings between programs, as it were.

He had not told her that he had been let out. If I tell her she might believe that I did spill the beans, he thought. He consoled himself with believing she wasn't likely to find out. And she had known he was going to resign. Let her think it as long as possible; then, if he had to tell her . . .

It was Sarah who told her, after being called into a conference with Norton—a conference which concerned Lynn herself. Sarah was deeply troubled. Idiotic of Norton to feel that Lynn might be involved! She had spoken to him on the subject and so strongly that he had admitted it had been only a fantastic guess on his part.

But she felt she must speak to Lynn. She waited until they were dining together one night in Sarah's apartment. They were alone. After dinner, when Lynn was talking of Tom's happiness in his new position, she asked gravely:

SARAH EXPLAINS

"Lynn, has Tom ever spoken to you about a rumor of a merger between the bank and the Frontier?"

Lynn put down the cigaret she had picked up. Her heart was racing. Instinctively, in a natural impulse to protect Tom if he needed protection, she replied, "Why, no; he never has—why?"

"It has been kept extremely quiet for several reasons." Sarah mentioned a recent appalling bank failure. "There had been a rumor of a merger there," she said, "and it didn't go through. Depositors felt that it meant the institution was unsound. There was a run on the bank and its branches, one that no bank could withstand. So it was thought wise that all the details of this particular proposition be worked out and the thing made certain before anything was said.

"But something has been said. It's been reflected on the Street. That is to say, stock in both companies is being bought up quietly, in small blocks. It may not mean anything; we'll see how long it goes on. But it is beginning to cause talk, and it looks very much as if there had been a leak somewhere."

"But what on earth could Tom have to do with it?" asked Lynn.

"Nothing—I sincerely hope. But he was in a position to know; he couldn't help knowing."

"Well, if he did know," argued Lynn, "you couldn't accuse him of buying blocks of stock—on fifty a week!"

"My dear, of course not. But he left the bank's employ under a cloud, and I wondered if——"

"What do you mean, under a cloud?"

LYNN HEARS TRUTH

Sarah answered gently, "Mr. Norton accused him of being responsible for the leak. Of course he had no proof, and naturally Tom denied it. But he had to be let out, just the same."

"Let out!" said Lynn, in a whisper.

"What did you think had happened?" Sarah asked.

"He resigned. He told me he was going to resign. He hated the work. He wanted to take a job with the U. B. C. people; he had just put off quitting because he didn't think I'd approve."

"He said nothing of that to Norton."

"Perhaps he didn't have a chance." Lynn flared up. But she thought, could he have known and covered himself by telling me he was going to resign? "Suppose he did say something," she asked, returning to the original discussion, "but without realizing it was important?"

"He couldn't help realizing it was important," Sarah reminded her. "At first, the quiet purchase of the stocks went unnoticed. Lately, all sorts of rumors have been current. It is evident, we think that some individual or group of individuals is trying to buy up all the available shares."

A BIG OPPORTUNITY

Lynn said stubbornly, "It wasn't Tom." Sarah was silent. Lynn added defiantly, "He wasn't happy in the job, that's all."

Sarah nodded. "I suppose that's the main thing," she said. She thought, Norton may be all wrong. Strangely enough, it didn't particularly matter to her whether or not Tom was the cause of this muddle. Nothing much mattered but that Tom and Lynn should be happy—and safe. She asked Lynn now, "You're happy in yours, aren't you?"

"Of course I am. I'm crazy about it. Not that I want to be there all my life; I want awfully to go on."

"I think you'll have an opportunity," Sarah said carefully. "I don't want to raise your hopes prematurely, but I can tell you this much. There is a chance that at some future date I may take charge of advertising. If I do, that will leave my position empty. I will be given a chance to recommend someone. And I'll recommend you, Lynn."

"Sarah, you angel!"

Lynn left Sarah's early, de-Lynn decided.

She left Sarah's early, determined to ring up Tom. If he were at home she'd see him at once and get this straightened out, she said as she was leaving.

Tom was not at home, but Hank was. Hank told her that Tom had been sent out to Long Island to learn the ropes at the U. B. C.'s station there. He'd be gone several days. "He tried to get you," Hank explained, "but no one answered at the apartment. He's getting on swell. Best thing he ever did, leaving the bank. He wasn't cut out for a J. P."

So Hank, too, thought Tom had "left."

As it happened, Lynn did not go home for vacation. Her mother wrote her there was an infantile-paralysis epidemic in town, her father was driven day and night, and they had decided it would not be safe for her to return. "Perhaps," she wrote, "when it is all over we can take a trip to New York to see you."

So Lynn remained in town, enrolling for the classes she could manage for the fall term and for a tail-end summer class before the regular session. She took her vacation literally in a classroom and during that time did not see Tom at all, his apprenticeship on Long Island lasting longer than he had expected. He telephoned her now and then and wrote her short, illegible, happy notes.

The fact that Jennie was leaving worried Lynn. Would she be able to swing the apartment alone? She thought not; not yet, at any rate. She spoke to Sarah a little self-consciously.

"Jennie's leaving the apartment," she said. "I suppose I'll have to look for a room or go to the club again."

"Where's Jennie going?" Sarah asked.

Lynn was vague. "I don't know; she's tired of housekeeping, I guess."

Synopsis

Lynn Harding, young and pretty clerk in the Sea Coast Bank and Trust Company, loves Tom Shepard, secretary to one of the bank's vice presidents. They cannot marry on Tom's salary, so Lynn plans to hold her position. She learns, however, that the bank does not want married women. She seeks the aid of David Dwight, prominent lawyer, whom she met through Sarah Dennet, her chief at the bank. Dwight had been Sarah's sweetheart years before, but gave her up to marry wealth. David, attracted by Lynn, offers her a position, but due to Tom's objection, Lynn rejects it. Later, Tom informs Lynn he has an opportunity to become rich by taking advantage of secret information relative to the bank's merger and buying stock. Lynn disapproves on the ground that it is dishonest and Tom reluctantly promises not to speculate. Shortly after, Tom is offered a position at a radio station. Anxious to tell Lynn, he asks if he might call only to learn that she is going away for the week-end with Sarah. Tom is questioned at the bank about the leakage of information concerning the merger.

Now Go On

Lynn was amazed when she learned the truth about Tom.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Every member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club who attended the meeting today was given a special ticket to the Father Cox rodeo and circus, with the compliments of Warner Theaters and the Sun-Telegraph.

Monday afternoon will be the Junior Komic Club afternoon at the rodeo and circus. Cowboys and cowgirls from the western plains will be the hosts and they have promised that their entire bag of tricks will be on display for their little guests.

Bronco busting, trick riding and fancy roping, bulldogging and calf roping by the cowboys and cowgirls, dressed in their fancy colored costumes, will thrill all the youngsters.

Remember, Monday afternoon, 2 o'clock, Exposition Park, North Side, is where you'll meet all the other members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club.

TO GIVE PRIZE

Today Manager Morty Henderson, of the Etna-Harris Chapter of the Junior Komic Club will give to some lucky boy or girl a live duck. So if you see a youngster walking home with a duck "quack-quacking" you'll know that he or she has attended the Komic Club meeting today.

The youngsters of the Davis Chapter held their monthly election of officers last week and the following were elected: Jerome Naodzonek, Grand Jester; Helen Affif, Francis Nessler, Eddie Louis, Verna Giancolam and Anna Coury were elected to the Board of Governors.

At all of the meetings today the youngsters were still talking about the wonderful time they had Thursday at the annual Komic Club picnic at Kennywood Park.

TO CLOSE TILL FALL

In fact several of them said that when they got home Thursday night that they went to bed and did not get up until it was time to attend today's meeting.

The members of the Davis Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club were informed at the meeting today that this would be the last meeting of the Davis Chapter until fall. The Davis Theater is closing for the summer and when it reopens in the fall the same set of officers now in office will again preside at the meetings. In the meantime, the members who live in the "hill" district are urged to attend the meetings every Saturday at the Schenley Theater where they will find the manager, Harry Thomas, will welcome them and see that they have a good time.

Members living in Mount Washington are requested to attend the regular meetings at the Mount Oliver-Harris where the children of this neighborhood always enjoy themselves on Saturday. Members living on the North Side are instructed to meet at the Kenyon Theater every Saturday. The Davis Theater will reopen in the fall and District Manager John Harris of the Warner Theaters promises that the first Saturday the Davis is open a special show and entertainment for the Davis Chapter members will be held.

I suggest that beginning tomorrow all the wets stop drinking and all the drys start taking a little snifter now and then. In other words, let's all taper off or on, as the case may be. Relief Hits a Snag

Governor Pinchot Declares Legislature Is Taking Steps Which Will Fail

Progress toward taking tangible action to provide satisfactory relief for unemployment at the special session of the Legislature has been disappointingly slow. While a program was laid out at a series of conferences called by the Governor, it has been found impossible up to the present time to adhere closely to the schedule. It is extremely doubtful if the members of the Legislature have shown the spirit of cooperation which should be expected of them while thousands of unemployed are facing starvation.

The Legislature has drawn up an economy program to provide funds needed for relief work. Gov. Pinchot pointed out this week that the measure, as it now stands, will not accomplish its purpose. He declared that he would veto it. The Governor's objections are based on several important factors. Many of the cuts exceed funds still remaining for the affected departments. Vital departments would be crippled and in some cases actual revenues would be decreased by more than the amount to be saved.

The Legislature threatens to pass a bill over the Governor's veto. In disregarding the obvious facts brought out by the Governor, the Legislature seems to be hatching another halfway measure similar to the original Talbot Relief Act which failed in its purpose and necessitated the calling of the present extra session.

The importance of the coming presidential election makes it essential that every person eligible to vote take the proper steps in time for him to cast his ballot. Here are some important dates to remember: September 7 will be the last date to be assessed for payment of poll taxes. September 8 and 20 and October 8 will be registration days and poll taxes must be paid by October 8.

Pittsburgh has an enviable record for efficiency in the operation of its Welfare Fund. Wilbur F. Maxwell, director of the organization, declares that its costs are lower than those of any comparable institution in the country. The total cost of operations this year including campaign expenses has been 2.3 per cent of the amount received.

Businessmen became a little more cheerful last week. Employment conditions are no better but signs are on the horizon which may indicate that the worst of the storm is over. Commodity prices have started to go up. This means that merchants and manufacturers may no longer be afraid to buy. Security prices also rallied to some extent.

Historical observance of the 150th Anniversary of the burning of Hannastown and massacre by Indians July 13, 1782, at the site of the pioneer town this week, is not lacking in points for reflection. With all our troubles, we don't begin to endure the slightest of the difficulties of our forefathers. We "burn up" over comparative trifles today, but the red man made it actual for the early settler.

Slashes in the county payroll, according to Com- missioner McGovern, have resulted from the removal of "political parasites, drones and pensioners." The saving, he says, has been great, and there is proof of it in a report of Controller Woodside of a large decrease of expense from estimates. It is tough on the payrollers, as Mr. McGovern says, but business of the county has not suffered, and competent business administration is all the taxpayer can afford to buy.

As hinted in this department a couple of weeks ago, the political bosses are of no mind to let loose of that fat political plum, the county delinquent tax office, estimated to be good for $100,000 a year. Proposal to do away with this fee office and collect delinquent taxes as the city does, through the treasurer, would mean much to the county, but the Legislature appears in no hurry to see it that way.

It has been many a day since Pittsburgh was a frontier town, and, by reason of its river position, "gateway to the West." But sports of the West can move East, so, in that respect, we will become a frontier town again Monday, when there will begin a rodeo for the benefit of Father Cox's jobless fund. Even the bronchos will "kick in."

If you failed to receive your copy of the first sec- tion of the Jig-Saw Presidential Game, watch tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Section number one will be reprinted along with section number two. Fifty Chevrolet and Plymouth automobiles will be given away as prizes.

Imposing of a fine and damages of $1,000 on a Mc- Keesport policeman, alleged to have blackjacked a prisoner in application of "third degree" measures, may be a lesson to officers who do not hold in proper regard the constitutional rights of all. These, our most precious safeguard against tyranny, are not to be overridden even by those who enforce the law.

How often have you been told that you are the "dead image" of somebody? Perhaps of some notable personage. It may mean money to you some time. Even if you are the double only of a comic strip, the movies, described as "the last Klondike," may want you. At least, they wanted the volunteer fireman from an adjacent town who can make-up to look like Popeye, the popular character of the Sun-Telegraph comic section. And he's glad he looks like Popeye because he has been out of work a long time, and now has a fat movie contract.

Could you spend $15,000,000 within two years? The American Weekly which will be distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow will tell how Max Lebaudy, son of France's richest sugar refiner, wasted his inheritance in this incredibly short time. The article will also recount the adventures of other notorious spendthrifts.

Hearst Papers Advocate:

1.—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

2.—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

3.—Immediate modification of the Volstead Act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending criminal racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

Where Lawmakers Draw the Line -:- By Nelson Harding

Between the taxed and untaxed drinks
Our dry lawmakers draw the line
That separates hard drinks from soft,
And they have drawn it pretty fine.

Fanaticism holds the chalk
That has this strange distinction made;
The mark is not indelible,
However, and is doomed to fade.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 16.—Purely personal piffle: Rich men's sons working in overalls strike me as phoney. I can sit all evening watching a fancy lady in a cafe. Richey Craig, Jr., has the best fitting suit seen this year. The cut of the lapel is the important thing. I usually spell Francis, Frances.

Nothing amuses more than a French gendarme trying to stop a street fracas. Mark Twain interests more than any other figure in American literature. A favorite feminine name is Lois. If business isn't on the upshoot when this appears, I'll never guess about it again.

I've a secret admiration for a rogue. But cannot stand a wilful liar. No person irritates so much as a woman with a few cocktails repeating herself. I cannot reconcile my acute sensitivity to animal suffering with a ravenous appetite for all meats. I've never known a native of Annapolis, Md.

The most attractive New York church to me is at the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street. I spend an hour or so a week pleasantly studying the dictionary. And am generally first to arrive at a dinner party. I envy the confident assurance of S. Jay Kauffman in facing crowds.

Otto Kahn is the easiest of all celebrities to caricature on the stage. Every now and then I am tortured by fear I've swallowed a sliver of glass. The most enthusiastic Irishman I know is Patrick Shanley, of California. I'm a sucker for every new shaving lotion.

I've talked more to barbers than they ever talked to me, and I'd rather live in a theatrical boarding house than the grandest penthouse. Odor of bananas reminds me of hospitals and nothing nauseates me like cigaret ends in a half filled coffee cup. I think Schmeling was robbed. He won all the way.

* * *

Some day I'll start around the world on 24 hours' notice. If I planned I would never go. I wouldn't visit a gypsy camp alone for anything. A cobra fascinates me. I like booths in restaurants where you can get away with a little plain and fancy gravy sopping. I sat next to a woman at a marathon dance who had occupied the same chair continuously for 52 hours. That's a hunk of sitting.

A regular correspondent is Billy Bryant, river showman. James Woods is my favorite hotel man. A lightning display on the Arizona desert from a train window was the most beautiful spectacle I ever beheld. The only fortune teller ever visited forecast death by drowning. No "next morning" description touches George Ade's "taste like a motorman's glove." When my wife grows silent I think it's something it never is. My every protest at income taxes, which experts pronounced unjust, has been overruled. So this isn't Russia? * * *

I think a telephone number would make a good book or play title. Such as: "Chelsea 5643." Gandhi does not interest me so much as he used to. For no reason at all, Harry Staton, a good friend, and I begin abusing each other when we meet. We used to join in the same sort of venom with dear old Clare Briggs. And he could take it! An usher recently gave me a stern look for laughing so hilariously at a Mickey Mouse. My wife moved to a seat in another row.

The most perfect verbal silversmith, to my notion, is Christopher Morley. I'm always thrilled a bit by tinted, perfume scented envelopes in feminine hand. One of the brainiest men I know believes that everyone in the world will have to start all over again from scratch within the next three years. Cheerful blighter! I have just ruined a comparatively new coat trying to eat ice cream on a stick in an automobile. Men working under acetylene lights invariably bring me to a full stop. I wave to about 250 crossing cops.

I have a crush on Anna May Wong. When my appetite fails, I can always eat a thin slice of cheese covered with jam. And can I gnaw the ends of spare-rib bones! I have to shake my Boston to wake him, coming home late. Swell watch dog! No human trait wins my huzzah like good manners. And, no one can express them like the well-bred Britisher. I pick up dreams where they left off, a week or so later.

The celebrity who looked the least like I had pictured him was Joseph Urban. A stranger once stepped up to me in a hotel in Reno and said: "You better not be here in the morning." I was leaving town that evening anyway. I never thought Ethel or John Barrymore could act. But Lionel, O boy! O, boy!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

So many years hitting these little keys, my eyes are growing very tired. Yesterday the doctor told me that I must wear glasses all the time now.

I have never minded glasses, as some women do; but to wear them all the time?

How I have loved it—this exquisite world! Always it has been the one thing that never failed to comfort me—to fill my eyes with it; to fill my heart with it through my eyes.

And now to know that I shall not see it any more with open, happy eyes; shall have to see it always through a film—a film that must slowly but surely grow darker!

Just for a moment I did not think that I could bear it.

And then a strange thing happened. Almost as if a quiet, strange voice spoke to me, I heard these words:

"But you have always seen things dim and twisted, child.

"Never have you seen the world as it really is. Never have you seen people as they really are.

"You have always been blinded by your own ignorance and conceit; your own fear and resentment.

"All these years your eyes have stared, unfettered, at beauty and wonder and mystery and noble adventure; but how much of it have you ever really seen?

"In every pair of eyes you pass the miracle of the human heart lies bared to your vision; but how often have you observed that miracle?

"You think you have seen your world; but you have never seen your world. You have only seen that which you wished to see; that which you were old enough to see. All the rest you have missed."

Quietly in my heart the gentle voice spoke on, and suddenly I was remembering other words—

The words of a proud and passionate old man who, also, had wanted to see and do everything without hindrance. And though men later on were to call him Saint Paul, there was little of saintliness in his young stubbornness and conceit, for in those first days nobody could tell him anything. He, too, felt he saw all things clearly.

But the years passed—

And sorrow came—

And his conceit dropped from him—

And at last he saw with his soul what he had not been able to see with his arrogant eyes. He saw that he had always been blind. And he wrote:

"FOR NOW WE SEE THROUGH A GLASS, DARKLY, BUT THEN FACE TO FACE. NOW I KNOW IN PART; BUT THEN SHALL I KNOW EVEN AS I AM KNOWN."

Now we see "through a glass, darkly," whether we "wear glasses" or not!

Now we see all things, understand all things, through the darkness of our own limitations—and nothing but love and wisdom can clear our shadowed eyes.

But some day, when we have grown up and are no longer foolish, bewildered children, we shall truly see. Then we will no longer fear or hate or distort the truth, but we will see the purpose that runs beneath all blundering, the beauty that abides behind all ugliness.

And so—I don't mind wearing glasses today. I'm not worrying about the spectacles on my nose.

I'M ONLY WORRIED ABOUT THE BLINDNESS ON MY SOUL.

Text for Today That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.—Romans, x:9.

The Veto: Mr. Mills: And the Debts

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Mr. Hoover, whose Reconstruction Finance Corporation is loaning $2,000,000,000 from the people's treasury to banks and railroads, is utterly shocked at the proposal of the Wagner-Garner bill that money be loaned on adequate security to private corporations and business enterprises. He vetoes the measure with a high-sounding paragraph:

"This proposal violates every sound principle of public finance and of government. Never before has so dangerous a suggestion been seriously made in our country."

All of which would be important if true.

But it just so happens that it is not true that such a thing has never been done before in this country. The War Finance Corporation, which was the inspiration of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, acted upon this "dangerous suggestion" in a crisis, not comparable to this of today, and to the very great advantage of the nation. The government loaned money to private corporations requiring such assistance when engaged in the production of war material.

It got the money back—and got the war material.

Lack of Frankness in Hoover's Veto Message

Mr. Hoover will never be able to understand that this present crisis is a far greater peril to our institutions and economic system than the war ever was.

There is a characteristic lack of frankness in Mr. Hoover's veto message. It is not proposed to loan money to any private corporation that asks it. The absolute condition is that such money shall be loaned only to such corporations as have work to do but cannot get the money from the private banks, and that this work will give employment to some of the unemployed.

But Mr. Hoover, having the power of veto, regardless of the repudiation of his administration by the people at the polls in 1930, the relief measure to be passed will be little better than a gesture—and next winter is coming on. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Ogden Mills Opens Hoover Campaign

It must be clear by now that Ogden Mills is to be the Borah and the Hughes of Mr. Hoover in the present campaign. The Republican convention was personally conducted by him. He fought the battle there against a declaration for repeal and modification; and more than any man, except Mr. Hoover, whom he represented, he is responsible for the utterly dishonest and cowardly declaration in the platform.

He now opens the campaign for Hoover in Boston in a speech that seeems rather remote from the realities of the economic situation. We can imagine how that speech would go anywhere west of Pittsburgh! Mr. Mills could do much better if he had a better cause.

But while he was speaking in Boston, some women of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform were speaking their minds about Mr. Mills. This organization was perfected to assist in bringing about the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the modification of the Volstead act.

It placed its cause above party politics—or pretended to do so.

It stood for the prohibtion plank at the Republican convention which Nicholas Murray Butler fought for, and which was defeated at the behest of Mr. Hoover, through the aid of 300 office holding retainers under the generalship of Mr. Mills.

It stood for the things that were incorporated in the Democratic platform and accepted emphatically by Mr. Roosevelt.

Whereupon it was proposed that the organization indorse Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic platform; and this was done; and thereupon some Republican women members formally issued a statement of dissent.

This appears to have been done at the instance of the same Mr. Mills who led the fight against the program these women thought they stood for in the Republican convention.

* * *

Another Campaign Of Buncombe!

Not all the Republican members, however.

Mr. Mills had told the dissenters that the two platforms were practically identical on prohibition, which simply was untrue.

Bishop Cannon does not think so.

The Anti-Saloon League does not think so.

Mr. Mills knows it is not so, though apparently he told these women it was so.

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, a woman of keen intelligence and sincerity on the prohibition question, points out the absurdity of such a silly assumption.

It will be interesting to observe whether for the second time in four years national prohibition is to be saved by people who are against it, for never has an issue been more clearly cut.

Are we to have another campaign of buncombe, of grotesque misrepresentations? We wonder.

An Interesting Story From London

Meanwhile, an interesting story from London: In the House of Commons Winston Churchill attacked the Ministry on the Lausanne agreement of debtor nations that the United States must pay their debts for them, without an understanding with this country. Mr. Chamberlain in his reply said bluntly that there had been conversations with Americans.

Of course he did not mean with a casual American tourist.

Nor with a modern Dr. Logan among the publicists without official power or responsibility.

He, a statesman in office, must have meant that some one in America in a position of official responsibility had given assurance that the debts would be transferred to American taxpayers.

With whom were these conversations held?

Mr. Hoover, Mr. Stimson, no one in the executive branch of the government has the authority to give any such assurances; and in view of the almost unanimous opinion of the people who are asked to assume the burden, and the declaration of Congress, it would have been sheer impudence to have given such assurances—impudence and worse.

The debtor nations in money, ships, and vast domains of territory, have had all from Germany that can be exacted from a conquered nation; they knew the reparations they asked could never be paid; and they understood when they begged us for loans to serve themselves that the repayments of the loans were not dependent on the full payment of the reparations.

Mr. Hoover's moratorium gave them the talking point they wanted.

Job Enough to Save Ourselves

The American press is rendering no service to the nation by conveying the impression that there is any measurable division of opinion here on the subject of the transfer of the debts to us.

And if Mr. Hoover, or anyone speaking for him from a responsible official position, has given any such impression to European statesmen the gravest kind of offense has been committed.

We have job enough to save ourselves from economic ruin; and the sooner the nations that borrowed and used our money understand that they cannot transfer their burdens to us by resolution the better for all concerned.

They ought to know by this time that Mr. Hoover does not speak for the American people, he does not speak even for Congress. And that the international financiers here are not just now the idols and the dictators of the people.
